HOOVER TAKES STAND FOR FLEXIBLE TARIFF AS BAR TO INJUSTICES

President's First Public Statement Demands Bill Be Enacted.

FARM PROTECTION NEED IS STRESSED

Sound Economic System Is Based on Plan for Changes, He Says.

TRADE-MARK MISUSE BANNED BY SENATE

Importations of U. S. Patent Products Are Also to Be Prohibited.

President Hoover yesterday threw himself squarely into the Senate dispute over retention of the flexible principle in the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, which Democratic leaders hope to eliminate by the aid of votes of some of the Republican independents.

In his first public statement regarding the tariff since the measure came before the special session of Congress, the Chief Executive declared it was of the utmost importance for the future protection of the farmers, industries and the consumers that there should be maintained the system adopted in 1922 by which the President may increase or lower customs duties on commodities on recommendation of the Tariff Commission.

Follows Simmons' Action.

The statement was issued only a few hours after Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, the Democratic leader in the tariff controversy, had offered a motion to eliminate the flexible provision. This motion was in the form of a substitute for one by Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, proposing changes in the committee bill, which, among other things, would make the difference in the costs of production at home and abroad the basis for alterations of duties rather than the difference in competitive conditions in American markets as proposed by the House.

Immediately after news of the President's action reached the Senate, Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, contended on the floor that in issuing his statement Hoover had "repudiated" the Senate Republican leaders. He launched into a long speech on the subject, taunting the Republican leadership in his characteristic fashion.

Advice Is Disregarded.

Recalling that only last week Senator Watson, of Indiana, marshal of the Republican forces, had assured the Senate that he had advised the President repeatedly to keep out of the Senate tariff controversy, the Mississippian said that—notwithstanding this—when the Senate reached "the heart of this whole controversy, the flexible provisions, we understand the President called the correspondents in and says he is for this flexible provisions."

President Hoover's statement noted that in his message at the opening of the special session of Congress, he had emphasized "the importance of maintaining the flexible tariff" as a necessity in protection of public interest.

Aside from the statement by the President, it was explained that he—having made himself clear on this question in his message to Congress—felt free to make a new declaration without transgressing what he regards as the border line between the duties of the Executive and Congress.

Rates Not to Be Studied.

It also was indicated that there was no intention to deal with specific rates of the bill, as these were a matter for long study and debate in Congress and entirely beyond the capacity of the Chief Executive to determine without exhaustive inquiry.

Replying to some of the contentions of the opposition, Mr. Hoover asserted in his statement that since the President could act to alter duties fixed by Congress only upon the recommendation of a bipartisan Tariff Commission, it could not be claimed that he could alter the tariff at will, or that despotic power was conferred upon the Executive.

The President said the reasons for incorporation of flexible provisions in the pending act, which is to be a substitute for existing tariff law, were "more cogent today than ever before."

He said all tariff laws must contain injustices, and that even if a perfect bill could be written many sections of it would be rendered imperfect by changing economic conditions and the constant shifting of relations with economic life abroad.

Hoover Explains Stand.

Contending that experience has shown that Congress can revise the tariff only once in every seven or eight years, Hoover said it would be unjust to continue in force rates which patently did injury to an in-

McLeod Bill Called Spurious Relief for Auto Mishap Victims

Measure Urged by A. A. A. Would Forestall Real Protection.

So-called "Model Act" Has No Guarantee of Compensation.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Proclaimed by its sponsors a cure-all for the National Capital's ever-growing epidemic of traffic fatalities and injuries and punishment of those who cause them, but in reality only a selling scheme for insurance policies and a false face for accident compensation, a bill is about to be foisted upon local motordom that calls for careful inspection and consideration before being given any approval.

The measure in question, H. R. 4015, known as a financial responsibility law for motorists, was introduced by Representative C. J. McLeod, of Michigan. Already it has been given the indorsement of several local organizations, but not all, by any means, of those vitally concerned.

PREMIER WILL LIMIT TALKS WITH HOOVER

Navy Discussions to Mark MacDonald's Three-Day White House Stay.

MAY VISIT FISHING CAMP

(Associated Press.)

Conversations between President Hoover and Premier Ramsay MacDonald concerning the Anglo-American negotiations for further naval limitation practically will be confined to the three days the British statesman is a guest at the White House.

This is indicated by the program for the visit of the prime minister from October 4 to October 10, which was made public late yesterday simultaneously at the State Department and the British Embassy, where Mr. MacDonald will be the guest of Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, during part of his stay here.

After spending one night at the embassy, the premier, with his daughter, Miss Ishbel, will go to the White House on the afternoon of Saturday, October 5, to remain until 10 a. m., on Tuesday, October 8, at which time they will return to the embassy to remain until they depart for Philadelphia, New York and Canada at 9:30 a. m. on Thursday, October 10.

Beyond a White House luncheon at 1 p. m. Monday and a formal dinner given by the President and Mrs. Hoover at the executive mansion at 8 p. m. of the same day, the only other activity of the premier during the time of his entertainment by the President listed in the program is a visit to Congress on the morning of Monday, October 7.

While the premier and his daughter do not go to the White House until 2:30 p. m. Saturday, it may be that the President and Mrs. Hoover will take their guests to the President's camp at the headwaters of the Rapi-

MAYOR'S ACT FOILS MOB AT ANNAPOLIS

Street Meetings Are Banned as Result of an Attack on Hit-and-Run Driver.

HEARING SET FOR FRIDAY

Special to The Washington Post:

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 24.—Aroused by the ill feeling that exists over the hit-and-run tragedy, of which David Carroll, 18-year-old shoe salesman was the victim, and Meyer Epstein, confessed driver, is held in jail for grand jury action, Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt this afternoon issued a formal order warning all people from congregating in any of the streets of Annapolis until further notice.

Mayor Quenstedt explained that he issued the edict as a precautionary measure against possible mob action, and strict instructions have been issued to police.

Meanwhile charges of assault and inciting riot have been lodged against James E. Carroll, elder brother of the dead boy, who attacked Epstein at the close of the coroner's inquest last night. The warrants were issued by Police Justice Louis M. Hopkins, following consultation with State's Attorney A. Theodore Brady. Carroll was haled into the magistrate's court and held under $1,000 bail for a hearing Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The security was furnished by Thomas W Williams, Eastport, and John M. Taylor, Annapolis.

Discussing the case, State's Attorney Brady said that, while appreciating the sympathy for Carroll's family, yet Carroll's offense was reprehensible.

Carroll's attack came at the close of the inquest and nearly precipitated a general riot among 500 persons, many of them women, who

The indictments are similar to those returned in 1925 which were nolle prossed in June of this year.

12 WITNESSES ON M'PHERSON DEATH HEARD

Grand Jury Begins Sifting Conflicting Theories in Mystery Case.

ALLEN GIVES BODY QUESTIONS TO ASK

Switchboard Girl Asserts Her Belief Murder Was Done.

OTHERS CONVINCED WOMAN WAS SLAIN

Policeman Who Brought On Investigation Says He Is Hopeful.

Hearing of testimony from 28 remaining witnesses in the grand jury investigation into the death of Mrs. Virginia McPherson, who was found strangled with a pajama cord in her apartment at the Park Lane Apartments Saturday, September 14, will get under way at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The grand jury completed the first day of the investigation at 6 o'clock last night. Twelve witnesses were heard, including Robert J. Allen, suspended policeman of the Third Precinct, who believes Mrs. McPherson was murdered, and Lieut. Edward S. Kelly, veteran District detective and head of the homicide squad, who insists the young woman strangled herself.

The last witness to testify yesterday was Miss Mary Roberts, a telephone operator at the Park Lane Apartments, where Mrs. McPherson was living when she died. Miss Roberts, for legal reasons, could not disclose what she testified before the grand jury, but she was heard to express the opinion last night that Mrs. McPherson was murdered. Miss Roberts said she saw Mrs. McPherson the day before she died. She was on duty at the Park Lane switchboard at the time she saw Mrs. McPherson, she said. Miss Roberts was in the grand jury room for more than half an hour last night.

Other witnesses who say they believe that Mrs. McPherson was strangled to death are Miss Eleanor Sheppard, a friend; William F. Mills, a janitor at the Lombardi Apartments, and Allen, suspended Third Precinct policeman, who, through his private investigation of the case, has brought about the present investigaton.

Allen Gives Jury Questions.

Allen was closeted in the grand jury room for nearly three hours yesterday morning. He recounted later his own reasons why he believes Mrs. McPherson was murdered, drawing attention to the man seen emerging from the window of the McPherson apartment. Allen also was given the unusual privilege of being allowed to appear before the grand jury before each witness was summoned so that he could propound the questions that he wished to be asked.

Lieut. Kelly, confirmed adherent of the suicide theory in the case, spent an hour and a half in the inquisitorial chamber after the noon recess. Kelly told the jury why he was convinced Mrs. McPherson strangled herself and presented witnesses to support his belief.

The witnesses summoned during the day, in addition to those already mentioned, included Mrs. Lillian Conway, telephone operator at the Park Lane; Miss Sue Thompson, telephone operator at the same place; Wilmer C. Ruff, manager of the Park Lane; Warren F. Embrey, chief of night detectives; Capt. William C. Stott, of the Third Precinct; Policeman E. P. Hartman, of the same precinct; Howard Templeton, clerk at the Park Lane Pharmacy, and Policeman J. J. Roberts.

Allen announced at the end of the day's proceedings that although his faith in proving his case had weakened during the day that he was feeling more hopeful in regard to future developments.

Loses Patrolman's Aid.

Allen made this declaration in face of the fact that he received a report during the course of the day that Patrolman L. I. Botts, of the Third Precinct, will not verify Allen's claim that he saw a man emerge from the apartment window.

Allen, in an earlier report, said that Botts was with him at the time. According to Allen, Botts is not expected to support the report that a man fled from the apartment house because he has his job at stake.

"I can't blame him," Allen said last night. "He has a wife and family."

Allen virtually admitted last night that he was as good as fired from the police force.

Too Many Enemies, He Says.

"The big mistake I made in this case," he said, "was making too many enemies. Everywhere I look I see expressions of animosity. I guess the

SHEARER NOTE ACCUSES NINE U. S. SENATORS

Were Recorded Former Communists' Allies, Magnate Told.

SECRET BRITISH DATA REVEALED IN LETTER

Witness Denies He Made Agreement With Navy Propagandist.

WORK HERE STRESSED BY GENEVA OBSERVER

Maintains He Saved Fifteen-Cruiser Program From Being Defeated.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Charges that nine of the twelve senators who voted against the cruiser bill at the last session of the Seventieth Congress were recorded in the Department of Justice as having been affiliated with communists were yesterday's contribution to the lurid correspondence that passed between William B. Shearer and the three shipbuilding firms now under investigation by a Senate subcommittee.

They were contained in a letter dated March 27, this year, that Shearer sent to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co. in an appeal for money. He says that there had been an agreement between him and Ferguson that he "would be taken care of" and he appeals to Ferguson's sense of honor as a gentleman to pay him.

Save Him $2,500 More.

On the same date that this letter was written, the Newport News firm, which had been doling out money to him in one form or another since 1926, gave him another $2,500 and called it quits. At least, it thought it was calling an end, because, according to yesterday's testimony, it received a receipt for payment in full. But, of course, Shearer subsequently filed a suit for some $300,000 against this firm, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation and the American Brown-Boveri Electrical Corporation, which started the present Capitol Hill mess.

Incidentally, Ferguson followed the $2,500 payment up with a letter to Shearer under date of April 2. It read:

"I have never made any agreement with you verbal or otherwise, nor have I ever asked you to do anything for me or for this company. Every time I have seen you it has been as a result of your own insistence as I have never sent for you or asked to see you."

Told of Chaotic Situation.

In his letter to Ferguson, Shearer had told of the chaotic situation that confronted him regarding the fate of the fifteen cruiser program when he breezed into town. About this time the program was in bad plight and the general impression was that it was because Chairman Hale, who had it in charge, kept letting someone else get the floor in the Senate ahead of him.

But this is not Shearer's view.

"On arrival in Washington," he wrote, "and after consulting with a number of senators, newspaper editors and others, I realized the serious situation confronting the cruiser bill. I was informed that there would possibly be a filibuster which was in the making. I was also informed that the time limit would be taken off, so that the number of cruisers would be cut down, or that it would be passed over to the Seventy-first Congress, or that money would not be appropriated to start immediate construction.

Tells of Secret Document.

"I realized that no influence was big enough to defeat the opposition which came from the highest authority in the land, including the Secretary of State and all of the internationalists and so-called pacifist bodies unless something very unforeseen happened."

But Shearer was the man to see that this happened.

"As you are aware," he continued, "I was the possessor of a secret British document, so vital and amazing in its construction that I took it to the Navy Department where, under the highest authority, this document was photographed. On that same evening, a photostat copy was handed to me and I immediately placed it in the hands of a United States senator and the press of this Nation reflected the power of his voice when it referred to his speech for the cruisers as the greatest speech ever made in the United States Senate. * * *Twelve senators only opposed the cruiser bill, of which nine are recorded in Department of Justice records with past affiliations with the Communist party."

The twelve senators who voted against the bill are Black, Borah, Brookhart, Burton, Dill, Frazier,

BRINGING OF BUTLER TO DISTRICT URGED

Brookhart Asserts Smoot Attended Alcoholic Dinner Recently.

WALL STREET MAN GAVE PARTY, CLAIM

Event Was to Enable Him to Meet Legislators, Iowan Declares.

The Hoover-Howell controversy over prohibition enforcement in Washington resulted in an exciting debate in the Senate late yesterday, during which it was charged that a local hotel had escaped prosecution and one dry senator accused another of attending a liquor party given by a man from Wall street.

Answering the challenge of President Hoover to back up his assertion of last week that enforcement here is lax, Senator Howell (Republican), of Nebraska, charged that the Carlton Hotel had never been prosecuted, although prohibition agents reported two years ago that they had seen liquor consumed in the night club there and, with the aid of "Charlie," the headwaiter, had the liquor delivered to them.

Senator Howell urged a new liquor law for Washington and suggested that Maj Gen. Smedley Butler, of the Marine Corps, be detailed here to clean up the city and make it a model for the country.

Smoot Is Accused.

In the course of the debate, Senator Brookhart, dry Republican, of Iowa, threw the Senate into laughter by accusing Senator Smoot, ultradry Republican, of Utah, of having attended a party in the Willard Hotel at which liquor was drunk. The host, Brookhart said, was a Wall street man named Fahey, and the party was given so that he could meet newly elected senators.

Howell read a sensational report made out by Harry N. Douthitt, then an undercover man for the prohibition unit, in which he described how he and three other agents purchased liquor and saw liquor consumed in the Carlton Hotel night club.

The report quoted a Mr. Dyer, of the Wardman Hotels (the Carlton then was a Wardman property) as saying that three high prohibition officials were friends of his and that he "knew everything that was going on."

Andrews Leads List.

The officials named were Brig. Gen. Lincoln Andrews, then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement; Maj. M. H. White, who then was prohibition administrator of this district, and "Jimmy" Jones, who was assistant to Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

Douthitt described a scene at the Carlton in which he said Dyer called him out of the club and accused him of being a prohibition agent.

Douthitt said that when he asked Dyer how he knew, Dyer said Maj. White, the prohibition administrator, had told him.

The report quoted Dyer as saying that White had shown him a report which said that Douthitt had tried to buy gin at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"You can't do anything with my place," Dyer was quoted as saying.

Then he was quoted as saying that the then Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair lived at Wardman Park, and that he was moving Gen. Andrews into the Carlton the following Monday.

Case Called Example.

Senator Howell explained that he had read Douthitt's report simply to single out a case where evidence of

EARL PEACOX CRIES ON WITNESS STAND

Torch Slayer Pantomimes, for Court, Killing of His Wife.

HIS MOTHER TESTIFIES

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 24 (A.P.). Frequently interrupting his story to control his tears, Earl Peacox related on the stand today how he killed the wife he loved after a quarrel in which "everything went black," and then, pistol in hand, demonstrated how he struck her down and then how he choked her.

He took the stand after his mother had testified for him, telling of injuries he had sustained in youth and of the unstable nature that sent him from an uncompleted school course to a long series of briefly-held employments.

For the most part the slick-haired 21-year-old technician was composed, speaking in a clear, resonant voice, but on several occasions when he was telling of the wife who left again and again during what she termed their "make-believe marriage" his voice choked and he wept with hands clutched over his face.

Cross-examination began late in the afternoon after hours of questioning by defense counsel, and almost at once District Attorney Frank H. Coyne handed the defendant a pistol.

"This is the gun," he said, "with which you felled your wife after you say she called your home a dump. Show us how you did it."

Peacox took the automatic, tested it to see if it was loaded and, at a gesture from the judge, stepped down to the courtroom floor. With steady hand he slipped the gun into his pocket.

"It was like this," he said, and reaching back he pulled out the gun, gave it a half-spin in the air to catch it by the barrel, and brought the butt down on an imaginary head. Four times he went through the pantomime, the spectators leaning forward tensely from the crowded benches, and news cameramen "shooting" the action from vantage points about the room.

After demonstrating how he had struck his wife with the pistol, Peacox told the district attorney that he had done it deliberately. He had then punched her deliberately and had put his hands about her throat deliberately.

He was then made to demonstrate the choking, a court attendant taking the place of his wife.

Zoning Commission Adopts Amendment Depriving Itself of Power.

FIRE HOUSE BAR LOOMS

The District Zoning Commission yesterday moved to restrict its own powers by adopting an amendment to the zoning regulations prohibitnig police stations in residential sections and requiring a public hearing before the Board of District Commissioners before fire engine houses be established in such districts.

The amendment was subjected to a most thorough study and long debate before action was taken at the conclusion of a meeting yesterday which lasted throughout the afternoon and until the evening. As adopted, the amendment reads:

"Municipal recreational uses, pumping stations and fire engine houses may be erected in any use district, provided that in the case of fire engine houses located in residential districts, a public hearing shall be held by the Commissioners, D. C. Police stations shall be located only in commercial or industrial areas."

No action was taken on applications to change the area southwest of Sherrier place, at the intersection of Edmunds place and the railroad tracks, in the Northwest section, from restricted residential classification, and the commission also deferred decision on an application for a similar change in classification of the area south of Bunker Hill road and west of Queens Chapel road northeast.

These are the two sites considered for the proposed Children's Country Home. The one finally selected will of necessity continue as a restricted area, and the commission decided to make another inspection of the properties before reaching any decision.

The application to change the old West property, just west of New York avenue and abutting on Bladensburg road northeast, from residential and first commercial to second commercial classification was granted in part, the reservation being imposed by the commission that the classification of the property fronting on Bladensburg road, a strip of about 100 feet, remains unchanged.

A request made by the Operative Builders Association that the commission discontinue its present practice of meeting whenever the occasion arises, sometimes as frequently Woman Accused of Second-Degree Murder Cries Under Attack.

Los Angeles, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The jury of five women and seven men, which heard testimony in the trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages on a second-degree murder charge, began deliberation on the fate of the vaudeville magnate's wife at 4:45 p. m. today.

Superior Judge Carlos Hardy completed his charge in 30 minutes after the State closed its summation.

Deputy District Attorney James P. Costello closed his argument with an impassioned plea to the jury that the woman be found guilty of responsibility for the death of Juro Rokumoto, Japanese gardener, following a collision between their automobiles June 16, and a prison sentence be recommended.

law violation had been gathered and no action taken.

Douthitt, who now is publishing a police magazine here, was sitting in the gallery while Howell was speaking. He said afterward that he did not know how Howell obtained the report, and added that, so far as he knew, it was last in the possession of Maj. White.

Howell said he "looked forward with confidence" to steps now being taken by the United States attorney here to proceed against the Carlton Hotel.

"Close one of these great hostelries for a year," he said, "and more will be done for effective prohibition in this community than anything else that could be done."

So far as the senators in the chamber were concerned, the highlight in the debate came when Senator Brookhart accused Senator Smoot of having attended a liquor party.

Smoot had been interrupting Howell to ask him if he knew that Douthitt's report was true when Brookhart arose.

"Mr. President," Brookhart interposed, "I should like to ask the senator from Utah if he ever saw any signs of bootleggers around any Wall street conventions at any of the hotels here in Washington?"

Smoot Asks Meaning.

"Wall street conventions!" said Smoot. "What does the senator mean? I know nothing of such conventions; I never attended one and I would not know a bootlegger if I saw one."

"I asked if the senator had seen any signs of bootleggers around the dinners given by prominent Wall street gentlemen for the purpose of greeting newly elected senators," Brookhart persisted.

"I will say to the senator," Smoot replied, "that I have not, but I ask the senator if he has?"

"Yes, I have, and the senator did, too, on the same night."

"I do not know what night it was. I will say to the senator that I have never been to any place where I have seen any drinking—any club or anything else, Wall street or otherwise. I will ask the senator to what place he refers?"

Place Is Cited.

"It was at the Willard Hotel."

"On what occasion?"

"On the occasion when a gentleman named Fahey, from New York, invited newly elected and reelected senators to a dinner there just to get acquainted with them."

"I was not there."

"Oh, yes, the senator was there."

"I do not recall it."

"I saw the senator there."

"I can not recall it. If I was there I did not see any liquor."

"No; the senator did not get any liquor."

"I did not say get it," said Smoot angrily, "I said see it."

The debate ended here and there was a smile on every senatorial face as the two men sat down.

Call for Butler Asked.

When Senator Howell got under way again he suggested that Gen. Smedley Butler be detailed to clean up the City of Washington. For Butler, he said, it would be an easy job.

The Nebraskan said that Gen. Butler had failed to clean up Philadelphia because he got no cooperation there. "Cooperation is possible in this city," he said, "and I should like to see a man like Smedley Butler brought here for the purpose of making this the model city of the country. He is a man of experience and this ought to be a simple and easy problem for him to solve."

New Legislation Suggested.

Howell also suggested that the Sheppard law of 1917 or some new legislation be enacted which would give every policeman in Washington the authority to make arrests for violation of the Volstead act.

Of the 1,313 policemen on the local force, Howell pointed out, only 28 are empowered to make arrests for violation of the Volstead act. The remainder, he said, can make arrests only for drinking in public and driving while drunk.

Discussing the question of diplomatic liquor, Howell reiterated his belief that such liquor can be confiscated, and he declared that even now the owners of the steamship Missouri, which brought the much-fought-over batch of liquor for the Siamese Legation, could be arrested and prosecuted.

LEGGE QUESTIONED ON STABILIZATION

Senate Hearing Held to Form Report on Confirmation of Farm Group.

QUIZ CONTINUES TODAY

(Associated Press.)

Examined concerning the failure of the Federal Farm Board to engage in wheat stabilization operations or to pursue a more liberal loan policy, Chairman Legge informed the Senate agricultural committee yesterday that inadequate storage facilities made the first impracticable and that sound business policy made a cautious loan program advisable.

The committee hearing was held with a view toward reporting to the Senate regarding confirmation of the Farm Board members.

While Legge was the only member to submit to examination yesterday, all members of the board were present in the committee room, prepared to take their turn on the witness stand.

To Submit Speeches.

Little verbal sharpshooting between Chairman Legge and members of the committee took place, but promise of further penetrating questioning was seen in the direction to the chairman to appear again today with copies of speeches and statements made by him in which some members of the committee hold that he definitely pledged the board against engaging in stabilization operations.

Senator Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, although not a member of the committee, used the privilege extended him by Chairman McNary to ask Legge why advisory committees had not been created as provided for in the farm relief act in order to stabilize wheat. The chairman replied that "jealousies" existed between the various organized wheat groups and that it was regarded as difficult to name an advisory body.

The Iowa senator contended the board should have formed a committee from the unorganized farmers, but Legge asserted this would have been contrary to law.

Indefinite on Stabilization.

"Well," Brookhart said, "the most important section of this bill is that relating to stabilization of agriculture and that you have entirely neglected."

"If that was wrong," Legge replied, "we have been derelict. It has been our judgment that that would have made matters worse."

Pressed by committee members as to whether the board had any intention of creating a stabilization corporation for wheat, Chairman Legge said one might be set up in time.

"We can't tell how long that will be," he added. "We hope it may be next year."

In response to questions from Senator McNary, the chairman said nothing had been done to aid the exportation of this year's surplus except as loans made to cooperatives could be construed to consist of aid in this direction.

FARM BOARD CHAIRMAN WITH SENATE INQUISITORS

Chairman Alexander Legge, of the Federal Farm Board, yesterday related his past connections with farming industry and with the International Harvester Company, before the Senate agricultural committee, which began its consideration of the nominations of the board members who have been serving under recess appointments since the board was organized early in the summer. NATION'S TAX BILL TO BE CUT IN 1930

Income Levies Pour Great Amount Into Treasury and Permit Slash.

STOCKS' ACTIVITY CITED

(Associated Press.)

The Nation's tax bill, which in the fiscal year 1929 totaled $2,938,019,000, will be cut next year because business prosperity is rolling up an unequaled amount of income taxes.

The incomes taxes received by the Government since January 1 had totaled $1,900,578,000 at the close of business on September 11, or $233,000,000 more than had been received on September 30 of last year, and only $269,000,000 less than was collected in the entire 1928 calendar year.

In addition to the collections already made, the December payments and those due before that time are expected to add another $600,000,000 and bring the total of income tax payments for the 12 months of 1929 to $2,500,000,000.

In view of the immense income tax receipts the Treasury will recommend that the next Congress reduce taxes, effective next March 15. How much the reduction will be or how it will be distributed has not been determined, but the amount of the cut will be substantial. The Treasury expects that income tax payments for the first quarter of 1929, which will be made on next March 15, will equal if not surpass the payments of last March, when $601,000,000 rolled into the Government coffers.

The greatest increase in income tax payments this year was attributed by Treasury officials to the active stock market, which enabled thousands of citizens to take their profit and thus increase their income tax payments. With the stock market continuing active and with no prospect of diminishing, the Treasury experts look for equal, if not larger, income tax payments from this year's income than from last and the first two of those payments in March and June will go into the revenues of the present fiscal year.

MRS. PANTAGES JURY BEGINS DELIBERATION

quently interrupted the bitter attacks made by Chief Prosecutor James P. Costello in his closing argument.

Costello accused the defense attorney of "deliberately misrepresenting the evidence" in a summation which Steuer completed this morning with a plea for "justice—nothing but justice" for the defendant.

The prosecutor's accusation of "deliberate twisting" of the evidence precipitated a verbal battle in which attorneys on both sides leaped to take part. Steuer retaliated that Costello himself was misinterpreting the trial evidence, which charge the court sustained, mildly rebuking the prosecution.

In recalling to the jurors the State's evidence that Mrs. Pantages had been drunk at the time of the fatal crash, Costello declared that evidence of her intoxication was her abusive language. "Mrs. Pantages used an epithet so vile," the prosecutor shouted, "that there are not ten women in the country who would use it unless intoxicated."

Judge Hardy outlined degrees of punishment and natures of verdicts which might be decided upon by the jury and added "if from a full and fair consideration of all the evidence in the case, you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant unlawfully caused an automobile she was driving to collide with that of Juro Rokumoto and that the Japanese was thereby injured and thereafter died, and that the injuries so inflicted by the defendant contributed to the cause of his death, although other causes also contributed to the cause of his death, you are instructed that the causal connection between the unlawful act and the death has been made out, and it will be your duty to find the defendant criminally responsible."

Twenty minutes after the jury retired it sent for copies of the court's instructions and diagrams of the corner of Serrano street and Sunset boulevard where the collision occurred.

During the closing minutes of the trial Mrs. Pantages, who sobbed as Costello opened his argument, sat at the counsel table apparently unmoved while her husband, Alexander T. Pantages, who faces trial October 1, on two statutory charges brought by Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer, wept openly. Faces of other members of Mrs. Pantages' family were tear stained.

NANKING CONFIRMS BORDER DISORDERS

Dispatches Indicate That Situation Is Graver Than Admitted.

RIVER TRAFFIC IS BARRED

Shanghai, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Despite continued denials of the Nationalist government of disorders in Ichang and the defection of Gen. Chang Fak Wei, apparently authentic dispatches received here tonight indicated that the situation was more serious than the public has been given to believe.

While Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nationalist government, denied that the government had moved troops up the Yangtse River, authentic information from Hankow stated that a Chinese commercial steamer had limped into port badly battered by heavy gunfire and bringing news of a serious blow inflicted on Nationalist troops by Chang Fak Wei's "Ironsides."

According to this information, the Nationalist groups commandeered three commercial steamers and loaded them with troops which were dispatched up the river. As the ships neared Ichang on September 19 they were heavily shelled by shore batteries and were forced to heave to. Fifty soldiers aboard the vessels were killed and several hundred wounded, while the Ironsides captured 5,000 men, in addition to supplies and ammunition.

Two Ships Retained.

Two of the ships were kept by Chang's troops while the third, which was badly damaged by gunfire, was permitted to return to Hankow.

In addition, although the Nationalist government has alleged its control along the river is unquestioned, a foreign dispatch from Peiping stated that Chang Fak Wei controls the river from Ichang to Chikiang, 60 miles down stream. It was said that no Chinese ships were allowed to pass below Ichang, while British shipping had been warned not to pass beyond Chikiang after dark in order to avoid the possibility of being fired on.

Dispatches from Nanking said that Nationalist government officials tonight had virtually admitted that the trouble at Ichang was considered "serious." This change in the government's attitude was said to have produced a distinct air of uneasiness at the capital.

Conference Is Held.

One development followed another with lightning rapidity during the day.

Three chief subordinates of Feng Yu-Hsiang, former head of the war department, but of late rather hostile to the government, arrived from Honan and immediately went into conference with Chiang Kai Shek. The meeting was considered of the greatest importance as there were rumors that Feng's forces, known as the Kuominchun, had joined Chang Fak Wei against Nanking.

Hankow dispatches said that the Kuominchun were concentrating at various points in the provinces of Honan and Shensi and have begun to move southward slowly, ostensibly because of famine conditions.

Border Troops Moved.

The Nationalist government is concentrating large bodies of troops along the Upeh border, "ready to meet any menace from the north."

Gen. Ho Ying-Ching, who on September 23 said that the disbandment of the Nationalist government troops was proceeding according to schedule, resigned this afternoon.

The Kuomin News Agency said it had learned that the government was seeking to move two divisions of troops from the Wuhan area, which includes the City of Hankow, to Ichang, including artillery.

WOMEN DESCRIBE STONE BOY'S DEATH

Doctor, in Trial of Mother for Murder, Tells of Finding Poison.

AUTOPSY RESULT CITED

Belair, Md., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Two groups of witnesses, former women friends and neighbors of Mrs. Hattie Stone and medical men, predominated in today's session of Mrs. Stone's trial on a murder charge.

The women told of scenes in the Stone household in Havre de Grace at the time 15-year-old George Stone died, last June, and of conversations with his mother before and after the death, while the doctors named the poison which caused the death.

Among the women witnesses the spotlight turned on Mrs. Kate Wilson, former friend, who told of clearing away a breakfast tray after the boy's death and finding on it a cup with "something white" on it. Because she did not know "what was going on," she said, she poured the contents of the cup into the sink. Defense Attorney Harold E. Cobourn questioned her sharply about this, emphasizing that she first told of it to newspaper reporters and insisting that she did so to gain publicity for herself.

Tells of Faint at Death Bed.

Others among the women were Mrs. Catherine Ferguson and Mrs. Mary Solomon, neighbors called to help just before the boy died, and both said Mrs. Stone twice appeared to faint during the death-bed scene. Mrs. Ferguson particularly insisted that the faint was not genuine, and during her examination, when State's Attorney W. Worthington Hopkins tried to question her about other matters, the defense entered its protest against bringing into court all the "small-town gossip which took place about Mrs. Stone and had been revived since this occurred."

Dr. Charles J. Foley, who treated George Stone during his final illness, and Dr. F. W. Steiner, also called just before the youth died, gave their opinion that he died of poisoning, and testified they performed an autopsy and sent the boy's vital organs for chemical examination.

Tells of Analysis.

Dr. William B. D. Penniman completed the medical testimony by describing the analysis of these organs, in which he found about one-quarter of a grain of the poison. He estimated on this basis that at least three-quarters of a grain was in the body, and called a quarter-grain dose fatal.

An attempt to have a veterinary doctor, whose home was near that of Mrs. Stone in Havre de Grace, testify that quantities of this poison had been stolen from him twice within two years before the boy's death was blocked by defense objections, which Judge Walter Preston sustained.

forth that the models were valued at $700.

The models were destroyed by Borglum in February, 1925, the indictments set forth, after he had been dismissed as sculptor for the association and August Lukeman, present sculptor, employed.

Dade Smith, solicitor for the Stone Mountain circuit, said today he had consented to nolle prosse the indictments against Borglum on being persuaded that the completion of the monument depended upon the amicable adjustment of differences, but when it appeared to him that all litigation had not been dropped he presented the facts to the grand jury again.

New Device Tests Porosity of Cloth

Machine Is Developed as Engineers Perfect Parachutes.

In an effort to find the amount of air that should pass through the fabric of a parachute for safe landing, the materials engineers of the Bureau of Aeronautics and scientists at the Bureau of Standards have developed an apparatus for calculating the porosity of cloth.

Parachutes are designed to retard the rate of descent of a man jumping from an aircraft so that he will strike the ground at a speed equal to that obtained by jumping from a height of eight feet, or approximately 22 feet per second. The rate of descent depends principally on the area of the parachute and the porosity of the fabric from which it is constructed.

Besides being serviceable in the selection of the proper fabric for parachutes, the machine can be used in the selection of the proper clothing for any purposes. The type of underwear, blankets and sleeping bags carried by Commander Byrd on his present Antarctic exploration was selected partly as a result of porosity tests.

Pedestrian Asks $25,000 Damages

Bad Brakes on Rented Car Let It Strike Him, He Declares.

Allegations that a rent-a-car agency rented an automobile, the brakes of which were not in good order, are made the basis of a suit for $25,000 damages filed yesterday in District Supreme Court.

The suit, which was filed by Libara Nasella, a stone mason, of 220 Ninth street southeast, is directed against Edward Rudolph Tutz, of 502 K street southeast, and the Charles System, Inc., a rent-a-car agency, of 515 Eighth street southeast.

Nasella, in his declaration, filed through Attorneys Thomas M. Baker and Milton Conn, tells the court that while he was crossing North Carolina avenue southeast at Eighth street he was struck down by a car operated by Tutz. He alleges that Tutz rented the automobile from the Charles System and that the brakes were defective.

Four New Hoover Aids Are Selected

Full Corps Will Surround President When British Premier Comes.

President Hoover will be surrounded by a full corps of naval aids when he receives Premier MacDonald, of England, on his arrival in the United States.

The Navy Department yesterday announced the names of four new aids that will be assigned to the White House. They are Lieut. Comdr. Gilbert C. Hoover, Lieut. Jerauld Wright, Lieut. Walter R. Jones, and Lieut. Peter M. Money, all of whom are stationed here in Washington.

During the past season a number of vacancies have been permitted to grow up in the ranks of the naval aids to the President. Several were detached and given another tour of duty. These vacancies were never filled, as the President did not deem it necessary since he was giving no large official entertainments and functions that would require their presence.

Should the trip be made to the camp, the President would have ample opportunity to discuss naval limitation and other questions with the premier either around the great open fire in the President's lodge, or as they tramp through the mountains or sit under the autumn-tinted foliage of the maple and other trees on the camp site.

Alleged Rumrunner Slain in Gun Battle

Seattle, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—An unidentified alleged rumrunner, was shot to death in a running gun battle with Deputy Sheriffs James Moore and Walter A. Reinder here today. His companion, C. Cast, 31, who was captured, said he did not know the dead man's name.

The officers said they found sixteen sacks of liquor in the men's motor car.

800 Bottles of Liquor On French Liner Seized

New York, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Customs officials today confiscated 800 bottles of champagne and cordials, valued at $5,000, on board the French liner Regrasse.

The liquor was concealed in a water tank. No arrests were made. The captain was summoned to an inquiry to fix the responsibility for the liquor being on board his ship.

2,000 Bootleggers Sell Rum Here, Gibson Says

Brattleboro, Vt., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Representative Ernest W. Gibson, of Brattleboro, chairman of a subcommittee, which investigated conditions in the District of Columbia recently, tonight said that, according to his recollection of testimony, "At least 2,000 bootleggers were doing business in the District of Columbia, according to the great majority of witnesses examined."

Prohibition Commissioner James N. Doran, police officials and various investigators were among those who appeared before the subcommittee, Gibson said, their testimony covering the years 1927, 1928 and part of 1929. Gibson said he already had ordered the records of the investigation turned over to President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission.

Gibson's statement was made in answer to questions regarding the charge of Senator Howell, of Nebraska, that Washington was a "wet city" and President Hoover's answer asking for definite facts.

Woman Night Club Guest Fights Champagne's Cost

Accused by Evelyn Nesbit, Cabaret Hostess, Miss Callegarde, According to Lawyer, Halted Payment on $600 Check for Four Quarts.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 24 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—Champagne is $100 a quart at the Follies Bergere Night Club here, where Evelyn Nesbit is hostess, and therefore the bill for four quarts even if you add it up after you have consumed that quantity, could not possibly be $600, not even at a night club.

So argued counsel for Miss Charlotte Calegarde, 30, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., before Magistrate A. L. Jacoby today, on her arraignment on a worthless check charge. Miss Calegarde was ordered held in $1,000 bail for the Atlantic County grand jury, and Miss Nesbit and Peter Larosa, manager of the club, were held in the same amount as material witnesses.

The story told on the stand by Miss Nesbit, divorced wife of Harry K Thaw, differed somewhat from that of Miss Calegarde. According to Miss Nesbit, she indorsed a check for $600 given by Miss Calegarde following a little party staged at the night club two weeks ago by the Mount Vernon woman. When the check "bounced back" she had Miss Calegarde, who has spent the summer at a beach-front hotel, arrested.

John Rauffenbart, attorney for Miss Calegarde, denied the check "bounced back."

"Miss Calegarde had payment on it stopped," he said. "My client and a group of friends went to the night club and were there several hours. They ordered champagne, only four quarts, however. Miss Calegarde was willing to pay for this, even though the charge was $100 a quart. When she got her bill from the waiter she had been charged with six quarts."

Miss Calegarde at first refused to pay, but was persuaded by Miss Nesbit and Larosa. Later she again changed her mind, and wired her bank to stop payment, Rauffenbart said.

COLORADO TO FIGHT FOR BANKER'S LOOT

Any Attempt of New York Victims to Regain Funds Opposed.

WAGGONER NEARS EAST

Denver, Colo., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The State of Colorado will fight any attempt by six New York banks to recover securities obtained by the Bank of Telluride, Colo., through the manipulations of C. D. Waggoner, bank president.

This announcement was made today by Robert E. Winbourn, attorney general, on his return from New York.

Creditors Held Innocent.

"The creditors of the Bank of Telluride are innocent third parties to the affair," said Winbourn. He added that the six New York banks swindled by the Telluride Bank president must obtain title to the securities in the Colorado courts before he will consent to their being turned over by Grant McFerson, State bank commissioner, said the attorney general who made a trip to Washington and New York in an effort to learn the legal status of Waggoner's financial coup.

"We will entertain no 'moral' claim to paper held by McFerson," continued Winbourn.

The State bank commissioner now is liquidating the assets of the Telluride Bank in an effort to meet the claims of depositors. McFerson himself has announced that pending some disposition of the case by New York authorities he is holding the paper in trust.

Banker Blames Detective.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Failure of a detective agency to comply with the wishes of the six duped New York banks to keep quiet the fact they had been victimized to the extent of a half million dollars, cost him his freedom, C. D. Waggoner, Telluride, Colo., bank president is quoted as saying in a special dispatch to the Associated Press, filed today in Chicago by one of his guards on his journey to New oYrk.

The guard quotes Waggoner as saying the New York financial institutions did not want news they had been swindled to reach the press, but that a detective agency working on the case "spilled the beans" and in so doing indirectly caused his arrest.

Banks Wanted Silence.

Waggoner still believes he would have his freedom had it not been for this slip, as he claims the New York banks were attempting to keep quiet the fact they had been outwitted by the small town banker.

The telegram from the guard also stated Waggoner said he did not plan to plead guilty at his trial in New York, but would work for the lightest sentence possible. The banker also told his guards he knows $378,000 of the $495,000 he obtained from the New York financial institutions reached the Telluride Bank.

Waggoner, with his guards, will reach New York about 3:30 p. m. tomorrow, where the banker will rejoin his wife and son, who went to New York last week to appear before the Federal grand jury.

Two Men Are Drowned When Boat Capsizes

Monroe, La., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Two men, George L. Morehead and Charles White, of Monroe, were drowned and a third, John A. Petty, was injured by the capsizing of their fishing boat in the swirling waters of the Ouachita River near the Riverton locks.

The men were employed by the Illinois Central Railroad.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

THE women are being brought into the fight against the tariff bill, and no one knows where it is all going to end. The initiative in starting this drive has been taken by a group until now interested only in one schedule—that raising the duty on sugar. This group has been fighting the increase on behalf of the Cuban sugar industry, and incidentally of the 800,000,000 American dollars invested in Cuban sugar.

What with the Democratic executive committee putting out almost daily statements, with the newspapers in the big cities close to Washington hammering away, and with defenses of the bill or of particular schedules made in the far-from-sanctional manner of Senators Reed Smoot and David A. Reed, the attack on the bill has had all the best of it so far as getting a public hearing is concerned.

Now comes the attempt to organize the women against the bill on the ground that it will increase their housekeeping expenses, the drive starting with two interviews, one quoting Miss Mina Bruere, president of the Association of Bank Women, and the other quoting Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, former vice chairman of the Democratic national committee.

* * * *

UNDERLYING this move is an intensely interesting decision on the part of those fighting an increase in the sugar tariff. It represents apparently a conviction on their part that it may be necessary to defeat the bill as a whole in order to prevent the duty on sugar from being increased. This, of course, would be entirely satisfactory to Cuba. It would be to her interest to see the bill fail. Not only is the sugar tariff likely, in the opinion of her representatives, to make the already desperate plight of her sugar planters worse, but there are the duties imposed on early fruits and vegetables placed in the bill chiefly for the benefit of Florida, and as a result of which the entire Florida delegation, although every one a Democrat, voted for the bill as a whole in the House.

Also there is the action on manganese, though of course this may be rescinded. Cuba sends some manganese to the United States. Under the present law there is a duty of 1 cent a pound on manganese, but Cuba has a differential on the same principle that gives her a differential on sugar, so that hers comes in duty free. So that the tariff on manganese was a benefit to Cuba. But now the Senate finance committee has removed that!

* * * *

THERE is another twist to the strategy of the friends of Cuban sugar, however. President Hoover showed early in the fight that while he desired to protect the domestic producers, he did not wish to increase prices exorbitantly to the consumers. That was his idea in looking into the sliding scale proposed for the sugar schedule, which would make the duty high when the price of sugar was low, and vice versa.

Following this it became certain, despite the widespread opinion to the contrary which prevailed until recently, that Mr. Hoover favored passage of the bill as a whole. This was shown when the President expressed the view in conversations with senators that Pennsylvania, as a great protection State, was entitled to have two votes in determining the fate of this protective tariff bill. Mr. Hoover did not express a hope for the seating of Vare, but he thought the question should be settled so that if Vare could not be seated and vote, Pennsylvania might get a new senator who could.

* * * *

TAKEN in conjunction with the extreme closeness of the probable vote on the bill as a whole, therefore, it is sound strategy for those fighting a particular schedule to raise such a fanfare against the bill as a whole that what appear to be the more unpopular schedules may be dropped overboard in an attempt to save the bill itself on the final roll call.

Sugar is not the only schedule suffering from such a drive. Boots and shoes constitute another outstanding example. There is lots of talk, speeches and editorial writing about the profits of the United States Steel Corporation, the Aluminum Co. and others, but so far the agitators have succeeded in getting considerable more attention centered on sugar and shoes than on products in which the average citizen has only an academic or at most an indirect interest.

Menwhile the senators who desire a higher duty for sugar—those from the beet sugar States, from Louisiana and Florida, which last has only recently joined Louisiana as highly interested in cane—may be expected to form just such a bloc as is apparently succeeding in forcing a duty on shingles.

* * * *

THERE was an outcry against the duty on hardwood and shingles imposed by the House bill, coming not only from consumers, but from big lumber interests, whose forests happened to be in Canada. So the Senate finance committee removed the duty on shingles. Now it appears that the bloc of Northwestern senators has been strong enough to insure the return of the shingle duty to the bill.

The sugar situation is the more interesting because from present calculations the votes of the "Democratic sugar senators" are absolutely essential to final passage of the bill.

SENATORS ACCUSED IN SHEARER'S NOTE

Propagandist Charges Nine Formerly Were Allies of Communists.

TELLS OF WORK HERE

McMaster, Morris, Nye, Shipstead, Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Walsh, of Montana.

The senator who made the great speech is probably former Senator "Jim" Reed and the recollection is that he did say something about a British document which was later denounced as a forgery.

These are not all of the activities cited in his letter, of course. At another point, however, it apparently bears out the testimony of Ferguson at the morning session that Shearer had been harassing him for months, trying to sell himself as a Washington representative. Ferguson said he had told him "to keep out of Washington."

"It is true," Shearer coyly admitted in the letter, "that I have been ruthless and relentless, and if, at times, I struck below the belt it was because the fight became unfair, and at times I was combating treason as well as un-Americanism. I neither asked for quarter nor gave it and the position I assumed seemed justified by the overwhelming vote of the United States Senate on the cruiser naval bill."

There is an appeal to Ferguson that "regardless of any legal technicalities or differences of opinion, I look to you as a gentleman who has the respect and esteem of every one, every one who knows you, to fulfill your agreement and understanding with me that I may settle my obligations created in the interest of the cruiser bill." He says that Ferguson then may call it quits, but he considers it unwise for him to do so because the pacifists have all sorts of money and are running wild here in Washington.

Letter One of Many.

Shearer makes reference to an "ex-Secretary of State" having "protested" him, but whether the protest was to Ferguson is not disclosed.

This letter is but one of many that Shearer sent the shipbuilders in their hectic experience with him. There are others reporting on his work at the Geneva conference telling hair-splitting tales of intrigue, fights among American delegates, the British spreading anti-American propaganda, and of his circularization of the American correspondents. Senator Henry Allen, of Kansas, said they exceeded any dime novel in lurid literature.

The shipbuilders have insisted that they did not read the reports inasmuch as he had only been sent over there as an "observer," to get the low-down and tip them off on anything that would affect their shipbuilding industry. But neither Senator Shortridge, chairman of the subcommittee; Robinson nor Allen has been able to understand why they sent the man over, paying him $25,000, and then would not read his reports.

The thought that they have tried to get over is that one should not pay any attention to such reports as these by Shearer, but the committee has insisted that attention ought to be paid to a $25,000 man.

Palen Takes Responsibility.

Of all the witnesses who have appeared, the first one who did not early get ashamed of Shearer was Frederick P. Palen, vice president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., who appeared yesterday afternoon. All of the preceding witnesses had told the committee that he was the man to see.

Palen took the full responsibility, too, for employing Shearer, for selling to the other shhipbuilding firms. And furthermore, he did not "begin to get disgusted" with Shearer until about June 25, 1928, when Shearer kept appearing at his office broke, with tales of woe and wanting money. He did not get real disgusted with him until Shearer filed that suit a few weeks ago.

Palen testified that he made Shearer a "personal" loan of $500 on June 25, 1928, another one ten days later for the same amount, and that the firm loaned him $1,000 on August 2 and another $1,000 on December 28. It was later developed that Palen had been reimbursed for the two "personal" loans. He had a demand note for each loan, however.

Senator Shortridge wanted to know when he expected payment from Shearer, "the day after judgment?"

Pays $6,000 This year.

In addition to these loans, which Palen said he made because Shearer was obviously in distress, payments were started on February 26, this year, which had totaled $3,500 in a few weeks, and then on March 27 Shearer was given the final $2,500, making a total in payments for the year 1929 of $6,000.

Palen and Ferguson explained that in the controversy with Shearer, he had insisted he had an agreement with Palen to work in Washington at $1,000 a month. Palen had been disposed to hire him at the rate of $500 a month, so the final payoff was arranged on the basis of what Palen had been disposed to do.

Palen is such a spare, little man with a bald head and about 50 years of age, that it seemed incredible that he was the one who got the shipbuilders in their trouble. He was the frankest witness yet to appear, however; in fact, one of the frankest that has ever appeared before a committee.

His attitude seemed to be, "Yes, we did this and that; what of it?"

Entitled to More.

"Why didn't you take those loans out of the money which you subsequently paid him?" Robinson pressed.

But Palen made it very clear that while they really had been loans he gave the money to Shearer for work he had done for the "cause."

"I felt he was entitled to more money than he had gotten," Palen said quite frankly.

"To what extent did you consider his ability as a publicity agent or a propagandist in employing him for Geneva?" Robinson asked.

"I didn't think much about it," Palen replied.

Palen insisted that Shearer had rendered no service to the shipbuilders at Geneva as the conference turned out. It may have been that something would have developed, however, that would have been worth "many times" the $25,000 that he received.

"When the proposal was made for 7,500-ton cruisers," he explained, "had Shearer sent us a cablegram saying that it was being given serious consideration, we would have immediately stopped building our cruisers."

Wouldn't Have Been Surprised.

Senator Allen, expressing surprise that Palen had not heard of Shearer's activities at Geneva and had not read the lurid reports he was sending the shipbuilders, asked what would have been Palen's attitude had he known.

"I don't think it would have impressed me," he said. "I wouldn't have taken any stock in it."

"But in his last report," Allen persisted, "he fairly glows over the failure of the conference."

"Oh, yes, he was down here in Washington when the Senate adjourned once," Palen replied cryptically.

Allen asked Palen if he knew anything about Shearer's work at the first Geneva conference.

"No," he replied, "but I've been wondering since there is so much controversy over his presence at the second one what he did at the first."

All told, Shearer got $18,908 out of the Newport company. They carried him longer than the other two.

Incidentally, Palen told that that $225 which it has heretofore been testified was given to Shearer for the suppression of his pamphlet, "The Cloak of Benedict Arnold," didn't suppress the pamphlet after all. He didn't know why his company gave Henry C. Hunter, the lawyer who acted for the three firms, its share of that amount.

Hunter is to appear today, as are Lawrence R. Wilder, who had charge of the shipbuilders' Washington operations in the lobby for the Jones-White merchant marine act; Edward A. Adams, secretary of the Newport company, and Oscar Olsen, his treasurer.

The latter two are to be questioned about the secrecy of the payments to Shearer. Palen was asked about it.

"The purpose of these round-about payments, the reason he was not paid in cash was because you wanted to keep it secret. Now, frankly, that was it, was it not?" asked Senator Shortridge, in his persuasive way.

"Oh, yes, that was it," replied Palen.

SUMMERALL LAUDS AMERICAN MOTHERS

They Assured Meuse-Argonne Victory Years Before Event, He Asserts.

GOV. SAMPSON SPEAKS

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Mothers of America are "the sources of effective defense of our Nation as well as of its material and spiritual development in time of peace," Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, U. S. A., said in an address tonight before the seventh national convention of American War Mothers.

"Victory in the Meuse-Argonne," Gen. Summerall told the mothers of men who helped win that famous battle, "was assured in the homes and by the firesides of America twenty years before the event."

Discipline, "that shatters the bonds of fear" and enables men to carry on in war, is a complex and organic entity, the speaker continued, and its development is a process of growth. The discipline learned in the homes made possible the American Army, he declared.

In addition to Gen. Summerall, speakers at tonight's session included Gov. Flem D. Sampson of Kentucky, and Mayor William B. Harrison of Louisville.

Opening ceremonies of the convention were held this morning, and reports of national officers were heard during the day.

GRAND JURY HEARS WITNESSES ON MRS. M'PHERSON'S DEATH

only thing I'll be good for when this is all over is the street cleaning department. But, seriously speaking, I'd like to go into the newspaper game. I've done a good bit of feature writing on the side."

Allen spent the day vacillating between optimism and utter depression. Early in the day, when approached by reporters, he said:

"Tell them I'm very depressed over the looks of my case. I'm handicapped by the fact that I am excluded from the grand jury room during actual taking of testimony. This automatically prevents me from knowing what the witnesses are testifying or how the assistant prosecutor is conducting the case. While it is true that I am allowed to suggest questions in advance, I have no means of telling what replies the witnesses make to my questions. This leaves me entirely in the dark."

Rover Regrets Situation.

In regard to this complaint of Allen's, United States District Attorney Leo A. Rover had stated earlier in the day that he regretted that Allen could not be allowed to be in the grand jury room during the entire hearing, as he realized what a great aid it would be.

Attorney Rover explained that such a procedure would be absolutely against grand jury regulations and that Allen was being given a "unique privilege, as it was."

Allen Last in Room.

Allen was called to the grand jury room before and after the taking of testimony from each witness. He was the last person in the grand jury room before the recess was called at 6 o'clock last evening.

When Allen first emerged from the grand jury room after telling his story yesterday morning he was noticeably depressed. He said he was beaten. Then, as the day dragged out and more witnesses were heard, he looked more hopeful. The report that his "partner," Botts, will not support him came as a severe blow.

When Lieut. Kelly came from the grand jury room yesterday afternoon, he was grinning. "I'd hate to tell you all I told them," he said. But the odds are safe that one of the things Kelly said was "suicide."

Two other Park Lane telephone operators testified during the day. They were Mrs. Lillian Conway and Miss Sue Thompson. Mrs. Conway is understood to have known of quarrels between the McPhersons. Miss Thompson gave the pass key to McPherson on the day he entered the apartment to find his wife dead. In what direction their testimony leans can not be determined.

McPherson Reported Cleared.

That McPherson positively has no connection with the death of his wife was reported to have been established before the grand jury. According to detectives, McPherson has an alibi, covering a period of more than 24 hours that is "air tight."

Likelihood that the grand jury hearing will drag itself through another day and yet another was expressed last night at the courthouse. The testimony of 30 more witnesses has yet to be heard.

LIFTING OF QUANTICO BAN TODAY RUMORED

Butler Expected to Tell the Marines That City Is Now Open Again.

TOWN CLEANSES ITSELF

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., Sept. 24.—All Quantico became agog with activity last night when semiofficial reports were received that "the Marines are coming back tomorrow."

During the last 11 days the officials and citizens have bent every effort to meet the demands of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler that bootleggers and undesirables be driven from the town. Consequently the report that the general was taking cognizance of these efforts by lifting the ban so quickly, was a cause for rejoicing.

That the general was pleased with cleanup efforts has been generally known, but even the most optimistic believed the ban would not be lifted for at least two full weeks, and probably not for 30 days.

Town Reported Clean.

However, Gen. Butler let it be known yesterday that he thought the town was cleaned up, and rid of the liquor and unwholesome conditions which he gave as his reasons for placing the ban on the town a week ago last Saturday.

After visiting in town, the general declared that the officials and citizens were cleaning up so effectively that his ban would be raised before the week is out.

"They have been doing a good job," he asserted. "Not only have they cleaned out the 'leggers' and bums, but also they have cleaned their streets and vacant lots." He indicated that he was so well pleased, and that bad reports by his M. P.'s were all that would prevent him from revoking his order against the town immediately.

Ban Lifting Expected.

Citizens and business men seemed virtually assured that when . . . nine regiments are called for their weekly review tomorrow afternoon Gen. Butler will announce that Quantico is again "in bounds" and the soldiers be allowed to immediately visit their favorite barber shops, drug stores, soda fountains and lunch counters.

Whether the general would carry out his previous announcement that he will lead the troops into town with the band playing, was doubted, however, and it generally was believed that the men will be dismissed on the review ground and allowed to rush pell mell into town.

In issuing the ban against Quantico, Gen. Butler announced he was actuated by the deaths of several marines in automobile accidents, and the report of Federal prohibition agents that bootleggers and many undesirable persons were in the town.

Since that time, however, Mayor McInteer has led in a concerted campaign against these conditions, and the town is now believed to be what the general has demanded.

as once a month, and establish, instead, a schedule of three meetings annually at stated times, was deferred until after the first of next year, while the commissioners will study the proposition in the meantime.

Two applications which came before the commissioners yesterday after having been carried over from the previous hearing held on July 24, were denied.

One of these was a request for change in classification of 925 Twenty-second street northwest from residential to commercial zone, and the other urged similar reclassification of the property at 1307 and 1309 M street northwest.

Yesterday's session saw the conclusion of all present matters awaiting decision by the Zoning Commission, with the one exception of the question of hearing schedules, is understood.

'Flexibility Gleans Injustice From Tariff,' Hoover Says

President Hoover's statement for retention of the flexible provisions of the tariff law follows:

"In my message to Congress of April '6 at the opening of the special session, I gave my views as to broad principles which I felt were of importance in tariff legislation. One of the subjects I then presented was the importance of maintaining the flexible tariff. That principle was advocated over a long term of years by members of all political parties, and it was enacted in the 1922 tariff law. I advocated it at that time and since as a necessity in protection of public interest.

"The essential of the flexible tariff is that with respect to a particular commodity, after exhaustive determination of the facts as to differences of cost of production at home and abroad by a tariff commission, comprised of one-half of its members from each political party, whose selection is approved by the Senate, then the President should upon recommendation of the commission, promulgate changes in the tariff on that commodity not to exceed 50 per cent of the rates fixed by Congress

Authority Is Restricted.

"Under these provisions the President has no authority to initiate any changes in the tariff. No power rests on the Executive until after recommendations by the commission. Any change must arise from application directly to the commission, and his authority in the matter becomes a simple act of proclamation of the recommendations of the commission or, on the other hand, a refusal to issue such a proclamation, amounting to a veto of the conclusions of the commission. In no sense, therefore, can it be claimed that the President can alter the tariff at will, or that despotic power is conferred upon the Executive. It has been declared a constitutional procedure by the Supreme Court.

"Reasons for the continued incorporation of such provisions are even more cogent today than ever before. No tariff bill ever enacted has been or ever will be perfect. It will contain injustices. It is beyond human mind to deal with all of the facts surrounding several thousand commodities under the necessary conditions of legislation and not to make some mistakes and create some injustices. It could not be otherwise

Perfect Tariff Bill.

"Furthermore, if a perfect tariff bill was enacted the rapidity of our changing economic conditions and the constant shifting of our relations with economic life abroad would render some items in such an act imperfect in some particular within a year.

"It is proved by a half century of experience that the tariff can not be reviewed by Congress more than once in seven or eight years. It is only a destruction of the principle of the flexible tariff to provide that the tariff commission recommendations should be made to Congress for action instead of the executive. Any person of experience in tariff legislation in the last half century knows perfectly well that Congress can not reopen single items of the tariff without importing discussion all along the line, without the constant unsettlement of business and the importation of contentions and factious questions to the destruction of other important duties by Congress. Congress has literally hundreds of times in the past refused to entertain any amendment to a tariff except in periods of general revision.

Cumbersome Provisions.

"Although the provisions of the 1922 tariff act, as I have stated in the message, proved to be cumbersome in the method of determining costs of production and can be improved, yet despite this the agricultural industry especially received great benefits through this provision, a notable instance of which was the protection of the dairy industry. That industry would be in a sad plight today if it had not been for the increased duties given under the flexible tariff.

"The flexible provision is one of the most progressive steps taken in tariff-making in all our history. It is entirely wrong that there shall be no remedy to isolated cases of injustice that may arise through the failure to adequately protect certain industries, or to destroy the opportunity to revise duties which may prove higher than necessary to protect some industries and, therefore, become onerous upon the public, to force such a situation upon the public for such long periods is, in my view, economically wrong and is prejudicial to public interest.

Backed by Farmers.

"I am informed the principle is supported by the most important of the farm organizations. It is supported by our leading manufacturing organizations. It is supported by labor and consumers organizations. It has never hitherto been made a political issue in the last campaign some important Democratic leaders even advocated the increase of powers to the Tariff Commission so as to practically extinguish congressional action. I do not support such a plan.

"I have no hesitation in saying that I regard it as of the utmost importance in justice to the public; as a protection for the sound progress in our economic system, and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumers that the flexible tariff, through recommendation of the Tariff Commission to the Executive, should be maintained."

Prosecutor Acquitted Of Accepting Bribes

Clayton, Mo., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—A directed verdict of acquittal, freeing Fred E. Mueller, former prosecuting attorney of St. Louis County of a charge of accepting a bribe while in office, was returned by a jury in circuit court today when Judge Nolte sustained a defense demurrer that the charge had been brought under the wrong statute.

had gathered in the city assembly hall to hear testimony in the case.

Prompt and efficient work of a dozen police dispersed the milling throng. In the crowd were many sympathizers of the Carroll family, friends of Epstein, and still another group of patrons of the third district roadhouse where Epstein, in a drunken condition, sought refuge, and in which he was subsequently arrested by State Motorcycle Patrolman Albert E. Markley.

The hit-and-run killing occurred on the Severn River bridge of the Annapolis-Baltimore boulevard last Thursday night. The dead boy, with five other boy and girl companions had been roller skating in the moonlight, when the car, driven by Epstein, came along at a reported terrific speed, snuffing out the boy's life instantly, and proceeded on its way. Epstein attempted to set up a series of alibis, but his statements were broken down by some of his own friends, when it became evident suspicion was directed at them.

dustry or proved onerous to the consumer. Pointing to the aid of the dairy industry through increased rates by Executive order, Hoover said "that industry would be in a sad plight today if it had not been for the increased duties given under the flexible tariff."

Hoover said the flexible provision had never hitherto been made a political issue and that in the last campaign some "important Democratic leaders" even advocated the increase of powers to the tariff commission so as to practically extinguish congressional action."

"I do not support such a plan," he announced.

"I have no hesitation in saying," the President concluded, "that I regard it as of the utmost importance in justice to the public; as a protection for the sound progress in our economic system, and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumers, that the flexible tariff, through recommendation of the Tariff Commission to the Executive, should be maintained."

Discussion of the flexible section of the Hawley-Smoot measure consumed most of the time of the Senate today and is expected to last at least a week before a vote is taken on the proposal for its elimination. Both sides concede that the vote will be very close.

Senate Takes Steps.

The Senate yesterday took two steps designed to stop American industries establishing plants abroad from taking advantage of the cheaper foreign labor and shipping the goods thus manufactured back to compete in domestic markets.

By a vote of 46 to 31, it adopted an amendment to prohibit importation of goods manufactured in foreign countries under a trade-mark owned by an American citizen, and then, without a record vote, it approved a similar proposal to bar entry of such imported articles on which American patents are held.

Party lines were obliterated on the record vote, 28 Republicans and 20 Democrats joining for the trade-mark amendment and 19 Republicans and 12 Democrats combining the opposition.

Three Republican members of the finance committee, which previously had approved the amendment, including Chairman Smoot and Senators Shortridge, California, and Couzens, Michigan, voted with the opposition.

Democrats Favor Plan.

The vote was taken on an amendment striking out a section in existing law permitting entry of the trade-marked goods with consent of the owner of the trade mark.

The roll call on the amendment follows:

Republicans for: Allen, Capper, Dale, Deneen, Edge, Goff, Goldsborough, Gould, Greene, Hale, Hastings, Hatfield, Hebert, Jones, Kean, Keyes, Metcalf, Nye, Patterson, Phipps, Reed, Sackett, Townsend, Walcott, Warren, Waterman. Total, 26.

Democrats for: Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Blease, Bratton, Caraway, Dill, Glass, Harris, Hawes, Hayden, Heflin, Kendrick, McKellar, Shephard, Thomas, Oklahoma; Trammell, Wagner, Walsh, Massachusetts; Wheeler. Total, 20.

Grand total, 46.

Republicans against: Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Couzens, Cutting, Fess, Frazier, Glenn, Johnson, La Follette, McMaster, McNary, Norbeck, Schall, Shortridge, Smoot, Steiwer, Thomas, Idaho; Vandenberg. Total, 19.

Democrats against: Brock, Connally, Fletcher, George, Harrison, King, Overman, Ransdell, Steck, Swanson, Tydings, Walsh, Montana. Total, 12.

Grand total, 31.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who voted against the trade-mark amendment and for the patent prohibition, asked later for a separate vote on the latter, not because he thought the result would be changed, but because he believed a record vote would show how overwhelming the Senate would favor its adoption. There was no ruling on the request, which may be renewed tomorrow.

Texas Governor Asked For Troops at Borger

Austin Tex., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Gov. Dan Moody announced today that he was considering the advisability of sending State troops to "clean up" Borger, Tex., scene of the recent assassination of District Attorney John A. Holmes.

"I have received numerous requests from Borger citizens to establish martial law there," the executive said. "Just today I was strongly urged to do so and was told this step would provide the only relief for the 'law abiding element'." Gov. Moody said he would receive information from a personal investigator sent to the oil town which would guide him in making a decision.

MEXICAN ELECTIONS MARKED BY RIOTING

130 Reported Killed During Clashes in the State of Vera Cruz.

CITE OTHER ENCOUNTERS

Mexico City, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Press dispatches today from the State of Vera Cruz, where the first serious fighting of the rebellion last spring broke out, told of serious clashes in connection with the local elections of last Sunday.

The correspondent of La Prensa, at Jalapa, the capital, placed the casualties at 130 dead and several hundred wounded. Other newspapers told of violent encounters in Orizaba, Cordoba and the city of Vera Cruz, but made no attempt to estimate the casualties.

Pitched battles were said to have developed around election booths in Vera Cruz, and some of them changed hands several times at the point of revolvers. Cordoba dispatches said rival political groups used stones, clubs, pistols and knives to settle their disputes. Several fights of minor proportions occurred in other cities and towns.

Numerous Deaths Reported.

Cordoba dispatches to El Universal Grafico said the series of clashes there caused numerous deaths and that the elections could not be carried out because all polling places were held by one party or the other and their opponents did not dare to appear.

Women participated in the fighting, several of them being killed and wounded. Jose Solis, former secretary of the Workers Federation of Cordoba, was gravely wounded.

Reports of discontent over the political situation in the state of Vera Cruz had drifted into this capital some time prior to the elections. Opponents of Gov. Adalberto Tejeda complained that he was seeking to install Communist administrations in cities and towns and to oust administrations which had remained loyal to the government during the spring insurrection.

The governor, who during the revolution refused to join the rebels and barely escaped from Vera Cruz with his life, said that these charges were ridiculous, although he is generally credited with communistic tendencies.

Contrary in Durango.

The political situation is exactly the contrary in the state of Durango, where Gov. Benitez Terrrones, an avowed enemy of communism, is waging a bitter campaign against it. Complaints from Communists have come to the capital as regularly from Durango as complaints from anti-Communists flow in from Vera Cruz.

No indication was seen here that these disturbances had any connection with the earlier riots in various parts of the country in connection with the presidential campaign. President Emilio Portes Gil has ordered immediate and impartial investigations of these.

Acting Secretary of the Interior Canales said tonight he had no confirmation of the newspaper estimates of casualties in Vera Cruz, but was inclined to think them exaggerated.

Anacostia Citizens Meet Tomorrow.

The monthly meeting of the Anacostia Citizens Association will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Masonic Temple, Fourteenth and U streets.

45 Killed, 26 Injured In Moscow Train Wreck

Everdlovsk, U. S. S. R., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Forty-five persons were killed and 26 seriously injured in the derailing of a Moscow-Vladivostok local train today, six coaches jumping the track and overturning. Ten persons suffered minor injuries.

The accident took place 60 miles from Viatka. Two coaches were reduced to fragments.

First reports placed the number of dead at 30 but as rescue parties explored the wreckage the death list increased.

Good FOOD is a good protector

Those young people are healthiest and happiest who eat enough. Sugar in improving the flavor of healthful foods induces us to eat a sufficient amount, and to enjoy eating.

To keep young bodies strong — to strengthen young lungs against tuberculosis—to give the children strength to face rainy days and chilly days, school-year in and school-year out . . . urge that they eat enough.

Vegetables, cereals, fruits, milk—all these are daily essentials. If vegetables are bland in flavor, add a dash of sugar to the string beans when put on to cook . . . or to the peas . . . to the spinach . . . to the carrots, and they will emerge so well-flavored that children and adults will like them. Sugar brings out flavor in cooking, mellowing this, accentuating that one.

Tasty desserts—puddings, pies, ice cream, candy and cakes have their place in every well-balanced diet. Have them daily. You can get them at your grocer's and bake shops of just as fine quality as if you made them at home.

Remember that sugar is a quick energy nutrient to feed the active energies of busy people. With sugar as a flavor people enjoy the varied foods, so necessary to our well being. Sugar, nature's perfect flavor, increases the pleasure of eating.—The Sugar Institute.

Automobiles driven by Mrs. J. O. Alexander, of 19 East Walnut street, Rosemont, and Herbert Davis, of McLean, Va., were in collision about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the intersection of Cameron and West streets, and Martha Alexander, aged 8 years, was cut by flying glass and taken to the Alexandria Hospital by W. M. Kleysteuber, of Potomac. The child was treated by Dr. M. D. Delaney for cuts on the forehead, over right eye and on the right side of her nose, after which she was taken to her home.

The movement to secure a city park was again revived by the civic bureau of the Chamber of Commerce at its meeting yesterday. A new committee, composed of John Barton Phillips, Frank W. Noxon, Robert Carter, C. Page Waller and George F. Downham, was named for the purpose of making a further investigation and submitting a report on the proposition to the bureau. The question has been under consideration for several years.

The need for supplementary traffic regulations to meet the changed traffic conditions due to the heavy increase in the number of automobiles and trucks using the streets also was discussed. It was decided to hold an open meeting the night of October 28 for the purpose of obtaining the views of the citizens interested, particularly the business men of the city. The members of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bureau and the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce will be invited to attend and present their views, as will City Manager Wallace Lawrence.

A report made by Col. Clarence Deems, jr., U. S. First platoon, commanded by Cadet Lieut. Blake Parker, 93 per cent.

Second platoon, commanded by Cadet Lieut. Raymond Wells, 95.8 per cent.

Third platoon, commanded by Cadet Lieut. Martin Violette, 91.9 per cent.

Several appointments in noncommissioned grades have been made recently, the most recent being that of Cadet Elmore P. Mudd, to be supply sergeant.

Nelson Gray, president, in the chair, discussed the reorganization of the day nursery opened in this city within the last year and sponsored by the Rotary Club. F. C. Goodnow reported on a recent appeal for clothing for the children at the nursery and the ready response from the citizens of the city.

The 100 per cent meeting of the Leesburg Club will be held on October 11, and Dr. Gray urged the attendance of a large delegation from this city.

Short talks were made by Judge W. P. Woolls, of the Corporation Court; Justice W. S. Snow, of the Police Court; John T. Worthington and others. The Rev. Dr. Pierce Ellis, the new pastor of the First Baptist Church, was introduced to the club.

A free chest clinic will be held at the city health office from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon, conducted by a specialist, for the benefit of white patients. A similar clinic for colored people will be held at the same hours tomorrow afternoon.

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday morning gutted the frame store building known as Ballenger's store, in the 2100 block Duke street, near Diagonal road, causing damage estimated at $2,000, covered by insurance.

The fire started under the stairway, according to Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., who made an investigation.

The store, which has been unoccupied for several years, is one of the oldest in this section, and for many years was conducted by Ballenger Bros., being headquarters for farmers in this section.

A back door of the store was found open, and Fire Chief Duncan is of the opinion that the fire may have been started by tramps.

Post to Entertain Boys at Festival

Newspaper Carriers Also to Be Guests Friday Evening.

Newsboys and carriers of The Washington Post will be guests Friday night of the circulation department of The Post at the first annual fall festival, underway all this week at Fifteenth and H streets northeast. Every package of amusements on "Pleasure Trail," which covers the entire show grounds, will be opened to them.

The festival opened last night one day late, but amusement fans evidently determined to compensate for the late start by an attendance that taxed the capacity of the grounds. It will continue through Saturday night with the Melville-Reiss Shows furnishing all the amusements.

When the arrangements were made for The Post party, Harry G. Melville, owner of the amusement organization, said that he hoped all of the news merchants would attend. "I know how much newsboys and carriers appreciate any outside bit of entertainment arranged for them by their newspaper for I carried a route in Streator, Ill., where I was raised, for many years and I can remember as the happiest moments of my life our parties at circuses and carnivals."

Youth Loses Fingers Of Hand in Machine

He was taken to Casualty Hospital in a passing automobile and treated by Dr. Joseph Rogers, who said that his condition was not serious. Haynes remained at the hospital.

DENNY HITS MIXING OF CHURCH, POLITICS

Bishop Tells Conference at Cumberland That Such Mergers Doomed.

500 PASTORS ATTENDING

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 24.—In an address of nearly two hours here tonight at the State Armory an assemblage of more than 1,000, marking the golden jubilee of his entry into the ministry and into the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Bishop Collins Denny, of Richmond, senior bishop of the church, declared that politics and religion could not "merge."

He is here to preside over the annual meeting of the Baltimore conference, which begins its business sessions tomorrow.

It had been whispered among clerical members of the conference during the day that the bishop would have something to say regarding the church and politics, having been spurred by the activities of the junior bishop, James Cannon.

Recalls Civil War Days.

Bishop Denny told of the tribulations of the ministry and membership of the church following the Civil War during the reconstruction period. He said he would depart from his usual custom and read his address as "I want to be exact in what I say." He declared that temptations had been held out to fathers of the Baltimore conference that would have made their lives easier during that troubled period, that had they taken offered political preferment they would have sidestepped much trial and tribulation, but their solemn resolutions and pastoral addressess, from which he frequently quoted, were to the effect that they were to refrain from political controversy, that it was not their duty to touch on matters political, that they would not entangle themselves with the affairs of this life.

Truth in Eclipse.

He said: "The men of the Baltimore conference saw truth now in eclipse. They saw that our Lord would not and his church would not be forced to become entangled in political or even civil affairs" declaring that Christ, the head of the church, refused to be drawn in such matters he added, "Not a few brethren, able, ernest Godly seem to suppose that be cause a question involves morals, it therefore comes within the legitimate sphere of the church, as the church of a conference in its conference capacity. If that were true, the function of the church and State would merge for every effective relation between any two persons if moral. They saw that between the temporal and spiritual sovereignty there exists a deep and broad distinction and that while the two are not opposed, they do not merge."

Bishop Denny spoke with much animation in this connection. His address was also a learned defense of the infallability of the Scripturts.

Bishop and Mrs. Denny arrived yesterday, to be guests during their stay of L. Roy Kimes and his mother, Mrs. Annie R. Kimes, at their apartment at the Hotel Algonquin, the headquarters of the conference. Bishop Denny today held two long sessions with his cabinet, composed of the presiding elders of the district.

Eighteen hundred and sixty seats had been placed in the armory to accommodate the conference, while the augmented choir of 50 occupied seats in the rear of the stage. The choir rendered several selections during the opening exercises tonight. The feature of the program was the golden jubilee address of Bishop Denny, which was read from manuscript.

The conference includes 657 churches, with a membership of 90,000.

CENTERVILLE MEET FIRST

Richmond, Va., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Bird dog lovers throughout the Old Dominion face one of the most interesting seasons in many years, with at least eight field trial events scheduled for the autumn months. Dates for all of the trials to be held this fall have not been set, according to M. D. Hart, secretary of the commission of game and inland fisheries.

M'LEOD BILL CALLED SPURIOUS MEASURE

POLICY WRITERS AIDED

linquencies, by act of Congress, upon the District of Columbia as a "model for the Nation."

The bill now is nestling in the archives of the House District committee. Before it emerges from that committee with a recommendation, favorable or unfavorable, itbidsfair H favorable or unfavorable, it bids fair to become one of the most bitterly fought pieces of legislation ever affecting local motordom.

At present, seemingly, only its partisans have paid attention to it. Beneath the surface, however, it is apparent that this group will err sadly if it accepts the present condition as indicating a dearth of interest on the other side.

There are opponents of the proposed legislation. Their opposition is based not only upon an intelligent appreciation of the measure's inherent deficiencies but upon recognition of the selfish interests of some of the agencies sponsoring it. Awakening the public to these facts, opponents of the bill are confident of an avalanche of popular support for their point of view. The awakening, they believe, will prove a comparatively simple process.

Such a measure its objectors define as compulsory liability insurance for motorists as the insurance interests themselves would impose it. It meets, they say, neither the misdeeds of the erring motorist nor the dire needs of his possible victim. It is, simply, individual insurance sold officially to selected risks and at rates prescribed by the underwriters. Furthermore, once on the statute books, it is argued that the interests entrenched behind the law will be in an unshakeable position to resist legislation aiming at the same objective though less favorable to themselves.

Victims Not Protected.

A financial responsibility statute, such as is already in operation in several States, does not assure the possible victim of an automobile mishap or his dependents compensation for death or injuries.

It merely requires that motorists involved in accidents or in breaches of the traffic regulations which stamp them as drivers who might figure in mishaps guarantee their financial responsibility.

As applied to a common traffic tragedy, that of a motorist whose car hopelessly cripples a child for life, such a measure would not guarantee the child nor its parents one cent of compensation. The motorist participating in the tragedy is, say, the owner of a $50 used car, on which he still owes $30. He is the possessor of no other property. One day the car strikes a child crushing its chest and legs.

Death would seem to many the more humane result of the injuries, but instead of death the effect is a warped and twisted mind to trail through endless years of life in a wrecked and shriveled body. A hideous, costly tragedy.

Who is to pay the cost? The motorist who caused it?

No. The victim.

Where Bill Is Deficient.

Under a financial responsibility law, the only thing that happens to the driver is that his permit is taken from him until he in some way guarantees his financial responsibility against the same tragedy ever happening again. The first accident, to him, counts for nothing save to force him to provide means of payment in case it should be repeated.

To his victims, however, it counts for everything that is endlessly miserable from a social, economic or physical standpoint.

Making this point, unadorned and stark in its cold presentation, opponents of the McLeod bill can see where it merits the support of none save those who have something to sell, or those who would protect themselves against something more economically and socially equitable in the form of guaranteed compensation for accident victims and protection for the drivers often unwittingly responsible.

The original proponent of a financial responsibility law, from whom its chief sponsors in the District of Columbia are regarded as having appropriated the idea as less obnoxious than any other compensation statute, concedes its chief defect to be that it "locks the barn after the horse has been stolen." This official, Robbins B. Stoeckel, Connecticut Motor Vehicle Commissioner, declares, however, that the law protects the 'other horses."

Weapon of Oppression.

Comparable frankness on the part of those who have subsequently allied themselves on the side of financial responsibility legislation is held to be obviously lacking. Where Mr. Stoeckel concedes fully and fairly that the law is gravely deficient in that it provides no compensation to the "first victim" of an irresponsible motorist, others defending the measure, are charged with totally ignoring this tremendous shortcoming.

Another criticism leveled at the proposed measure is that it may easily become the weapon for petty persecution and oppression against minor traffic offenders.

Under its terms, for instance, an officious policeman with a dislike for a motorist who committed the offense of parking overtime, might exercise his authority in such a way as to compel the latter to take out insurance or give up his permit. It is not felt that this effect would often be produced, but that it is a possibility is vigorously resented in quarters alert to the inadequacies of the bill.

Prepared to go further than merely oppose the McLeod bill, many of its opponents suggest that, with the highest legislative body of the United States wrestling with this tremendously important problem, why should it not enact a real safety-responsibility law which properly and with justice to all could be made a model for the entire country?

In a series of articles scheduled for early publication in The Post, the McLeod bill and the general question of compensation for the victims of traffic mishaps will be discussed from all angles. The series is based upon the belief that, before giving support or endorsement to the McLeod bill or any other comparable measure, every organization and individual should give the problem the serious and searching study it richly merits.

Eventually, in all likelihood, there will be public hearings on the measure now proposed and all concerned will be afforded opportunity to voice their views.

It is universally agreed that scientific traffic regulation is having its effect upon street and highway safety. It is reducing the number of accidents per 100,000 vehicles. On the other hand, accidents per 100,000 of population are increasing. The point thus clearly indicated is that there is a limit to the reduction of casualties. In view of this, unprejudiced authorities agree that not only in the District of Columbia, but throughout the entire country, some means of guaranteeing all victims of automobile mishaps adequate recompense must and eventually will be found.

Prior to that, they insist, quack remedies must be kept off the statute books.

AMOCO-GAS

They've got to talk cost per mile to me"
-says the truck fleet operator

"PROMISES don't move goods around the city or across the country. Telling me that I'll get more power by using some imitation of AMOCO-GAS doesn't stir my interest much. I know that AMOCO-GAS will give my trucks all the power the drivers can use. The thing that interests me first, last and all the time is cost per mile--and AMOCO-GAS has been giving me the lowest cost per mile for years! I'm not guessing. I know!"

Cost per mile is the true measure of the cost of any gasoline or motor fuel. And it's on that basis that AMOCO-GAS has become the choice of owners of truck fleets, taxicab and bus operators and individual motorists who check actual cost per mile. Most miles per gallon--least cost per mile--that's the big thing to remember about AMOCO-GAS!

W. C. T. U. REBUKES NEW YORK PAPER

Misinterpretation of Note From Hoover Claimed by Woman.

OTHER DAILIES FLAYED

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, today criticized several newspapers throughout the country because, she said, they had misinterpreted President Hoover's message to the fifty-fifth annual convention here.

The national president, who was reelected at today's session, read a telegram she sent to the New York Times commenting upon an editorial which she described as typical. She specified no other newspaper.

The Times editorial, Mrs. Boole said, interpreted the President's letter as a rebuke to the W. C. T. U. when he wrote: "Too many people have come to rely wholly upon the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence, forgetting that the cause of temperance has its strong foundations in the conviction of the individual of the personal value to himself of temperance in all things."

Mrs. Boole's telegram to the Times stated that Hoover "knows that the W. C. T. U. stands for law observance," and its members "are total abstainers from all intoxicating liquors."

The telegram added that the W. C. T. U. did not presume to speak for the President, but that the organization was confident Hoover's reference that "too many people have come to rely upon the strong arm of the law" was in recognition of "our contribution to total abstinence, and that he was calling the attention to those other people who failed to recognize personal law observance as a contribution to law enforcement."

The convention continued in office for another year all of its elective officers. Besides Mrs. Boole they are Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, Des Moines, Iowa, vice president; Mrs. Anna Marden de Yo, Evanston, Ill., corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, Lincoln, Va., recording secretary; Mrs. Nellie G. Burger, Springfield, Mo., assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Margaret G. Munns, Evanston, treasurer.

Alleged "Hex" Slayer Hangs Himself in Cell

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Eugene Burgess, 53, who, with his wife, Pearl, was charged with the "hex" murder of Mrs. Etta L. Fairchild, 83, hanged himself in his cell in the county jail at 4:30 a. m. today. Both Burgess and his wife were scheduled to go on trial within the next two weeks.

The Burgesses invited Mrs. Fairchild to their house last summer and then beat her to death, throwing her body into a well. They confessed the slaying, telling authorities they had feared the reputed power of the aged woman's "evil eye." Mrs. Fairchild, they said, was responsible for casting a "spell" over their daughter, Eugenie.

Detective Seized In 11 Hotel Fires

Youth Confesses After Always Putting Out Mystery Blazes.

New York, Sept. 24 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Two bottles of firewater and the facility of an automatic cigar lighter converged temptingly in a brainstorm for a bright, likable young hotel detective who wanted to square himself with the boss for going on too many sprees.

The result was eleven fires in one day at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, one of the city's largest hostelries. None of these was discovered by Joseph A. Berlew, but in each case at the instant of alarm, he was Johnny on the spot with hose or fire extinguisher. He was doing himself proud, and his employers were thinking of promoting him.

All such hopes collapsed today. Berlew confessed setting all the fires. "Typical alcoholic pyromania," said Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy. Brophy heaved a sigh of relief, as did his chief Brooklyn assistant, Capt. William E. Coles, two firemen, eight assistant fire marshals and fourteen police detectives, who had been watching the corridors.

Day in Congress

SENATE.

Met at 11 and recessed at 5:30 to 11 today.

Senator Howell (Republican) of Nebraska, reiterated his charge that prohibition enforcement in Washington is lax and suggested that Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, of the Marine Corps, be detailed to clean up the city.

Senator Brookhart (Republican) of Iowa accused Senator Smoot (Republican) of Utah, of attending a liquor party in the Willard Hotel.

The naval subcommittee investigating the activities of William B. Shearer at the Geneva disarmament conference examined a letter in which Shearer accused nine senators of having been affiliated with Communists.

Spelling Club Prepares for Match.

Members of the Capital City Spelling Club are busy this week preparing for their clash with the Waverly Club spellers of Baltimore at the Pythian Temple next Tuesday night. The invading spellers are out for revenge for their defeat at the hands of the local club last April in Baltimore. They will be accompanied by a group of about 30 boosters.

Textile Workers Vote to Hold Jobs

Majority of Strike Ballots Counted Veto Idea of Walkout.

Elizabethton, Tenn., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Officials of the American Glanzstoff and American Bemberg textile mills late today announced that 2,893 of their operatives have voted against a walkout and 255 for it in a poll taken under supervision of workers' committees.

Ballots were cast by two shifts at 7 o'clock this morning, and the shift coming on at 3 p. m. was asked to cast a vote on coming to work this afternoon. The ballots showed 150 operatives in the Glanzstoff plant voting against a strike and 18 for a walkout, and in the Bemberg plant 168 voted against and 41 for.

While the poll was taken in the plant by the committees at the request of plant officials, officials of the United Textile Workers of America went forward with preparations for a poll of members of the local of that organization to determine whether a strike would be called because of what labor leaders termed "discrimination" and persecution of members who joined a walkout during the past spring.

That part of the letter you don't write, often says more than the message.

PROBE THE TARIFF LOBBY.

The Shearer inquiry, if it has done nothing else, has whetted the public appetite for information concerning lobbyists. It was expected that something of dire portent would be developed by this inquiry, tending to show that a conspiracy had been formed by American shipbuilding interests for the purpose of wrecking the Geneva naval conference and thereby plunging the United States into an orgy of shipbuilding, greatly to the profit of the conspirators. All that has been learned, however, is that several business men fell under the sorcery of a gifted gentleman who convinced them that he could obtain valuable information not otherwise to be extracted from Geneva.

There is talk of other inquiries into lobbying, but thus far no one has moved to investigate tariff lobbyists. Congress is infested with swarms of tariff lobbyists at this moment. Senator Caraway's resolution calling for registration of these agents, showing by whom they are employed, what pay they receive, &c., has been shelved in the House of Representatives after having passed the Senate. Why? Mr. Caraway proposes to find out why, even if he must have an investigation of the House by the Senate.

Possibly it may be too much to expect Congress to abandon its usual work to explore all the ins and outs of lobbying, but if an inquiry is to be made the richest field for exploration is in connection with tariff propagandists of all sorts. By beginning an investigation immediately hundreds of lobbyists can be caught red-handed. Mr. Garner, minority leader of the House, intimates that he will ask for a tariff lobby investigation. Why the delay? The House is doing nothing, and might as well contribute to the gayety of the Nation by grilling tariff lobbyists. Every member of the House can furnish a few dozen names of suspects. Why should the Senate do all the housecleaning for Congress?

GIVE US A REST!

"Not only a noble but an optimistic experiment," is the way the New York World describes the latest proposal to make the District of Columbia a model of temperance as an example to the rest of the country. "It is strange," the World continues, "that no one else ever thought of making the District a model in the country. For when you think of it, what could be more obviously right than to begin enforcing the law in the city where it was enacted?"

The World is more than 100 years behind the times. From the time Washington was a straggling town, politicians, propagandists, reformers and visionaries of all varieties have been bearing down on the President and Congress to make the Capital a model of virtue. Ridiculous schemes which would not be given serious hearing in any other part of the country are brought forth in wholesale lots for the benefit of the District. For every experimental law that Congress enacts there are a dozen politicians to demand that it be rigorously enforced in Washington first. The District has become an experiment ground for the whole country. Societies by the score have joined in trying to fasten upon the District all sorts of "reforms" that are tolerated nowhere else. Posing under the pretense of making Washington a model, half-baked zealots of one type or another are constantly lobbying in Congress in behalf of idiotic social "reforms."

The theory on which these reformers act is that virtue is a wonderful thing for one's neighbors. Politicians come to Washington filled with holy enthusiasm to purify the Capital, but they are quite content to leave their home cities in their sins. Senator Lowell, who pleads for more effective enforcement of prohibition in Washington, is not disturbed by the fact that conditions in his home city, Omaha, are such that a special investigation is under way to determine where the negligence lies. The Nebraska attorney general has found that the prohibition law is being flagrantly violated. Bootlegging flourishes in Omaha no less than in Washington and yet Nebraska has an enforcement law. Why should not Senator Lowell demand that Omaha be made an example of temperance for the Nation to follow?

Washington has been the national "goat" long enough. Let social exporimenters and theorists in Congress apply their nostrums to their home States first. Washington is willing to be made as pure as any other community, but it is tired of being vivisected and operated upon by quacks.

TAX REDUCTION?

When the Treasury Department announced several days ago that collections this year were running considerably ahead of those of a year ago, it was a foregone conclusion that the agitation for tax reduction would be resumed. It was believed, however, that the Treasury would follow its customary course, and discourage hope. But now it is said that the department will recommend a substantial slash to become effective March 15, and that experts will start work within a week to determine how much of a cut can be made and how it shall be distributed.

Everybody wants tax reduction, and everybody hopes that it will be found possible. Government collections for the first two and one-half months of the fiscal year are up almost $119,000,000 over those of the corresponding period of 1928, and tax collections for the calendar year are up $271,000,000 over those of the year preceding. With continued business prosperity, Treasury experts feel that income taxes will keep mounting until they equal, if not exceed, those of a year ago, and it is expected that the Government will end the fiscal year with a surplus of approximately $200,000,000 as compared with the $184,000,000 of a year ago. These figures, however, do not warrant at this time definite promises of tax reduction.

On September 18 the Treasury Department announced that expenses of the various departments and independent establishments for the first two months of the fiscal year exceed those of the corresponding period of 1928 by $21,000,000. Only four departments showed decreases. If increased expenditures are made throughout the year at a similar rate, how will tax reduction be found possible?

In addition to the expenditures of departments and independent offices, however, the Government is committed to a program of expansion and improvement that will require heavy expenditures. Appropriations for the current fiscal year total more than $3,716,000,000, and despite the expressed determination of the President to limit next year's budget to a total no larger than that sum, there is every reason to believe that no less than $4,000,000,000 will be required. The proposed Federal prison program will cost $10,000,000. The fight against the Mediterranean fruit fly involves an estimated expenditure of $26,000,000. Provision for Federal buildings, prohibition enforcement, flood control and additonal funds for the Farm Board will amount to a considerable sum, in addition to which there may be demanded an appropriation for Black Canyon Dam. It may be found possible to reduce Army costs, but it does not seem probable. Suspension of the cruiser building program depends upon an international agreement that has not yet been consummated.

The outlook is for increased rather than decreased expenditures, and the Government may count itself fortunate that its revenues also bid fair to increase. It remains to be seen whether or not they will increase sufficiently to make possible a reduction in taxes.

LEGISLATION AGAINST CROOKS.

In a letter addressed to Senator Capper, chairman of the District committee, District Attorney Rover asks for the enactment of drastic legislation aimed at bucket shop operators, gamblers and loan sharks. Mr. Rover indorsed the bill now pending providing for the creation of a commission to license all dealers in stocks and other securities and empowering the district attorney to stop the sale of securities believed to be fraudulent, but he suggested that the penalties be made more severe. In addition, he asked that the penalties under the bucket shop act be increased, that a statute be enacted under which loan sharks could be indicted for conspiracy and that provision be made for padlocking gambling establishments.

Senator Capper promises to take early action on the district attorney's recommendations. He is convinced that heavy penalties ought to be imposed in the first instance instead of waiting for the offense to be repeated and he is favorably impressed with the suggestion that a padlock law be enacted to deal with gambling joints. He promises to keep actively behind the legislation and feels that "there should be no difficulty in securing congressional action to end the operations of bucket shop operators, security swindlers, professional gamblers and others who prey upon honest people in the District."

The campaign against parasites who prey upon uninformed and unwary comes at an appropriate time. Seldom has there been a more active interest in speculation. On every side the conversation, if it is not of stocks, is of "numbers" or other forms of gambling. In connection with stocks interest lies not so much in investment as in the possibility of a "quick turn." Crooked operators have found their golden opportunity in the universal speculative fever, and they are "cleaning up" in company with professional gamblers and loan sharks.

It is desirable that early action be had along the line suggested in Mr. Rover's letter to Senator Capper.

VAST INLAND WATERWAYS.

Few persons realize that the Mississippi River drains approximately one and a quarter million square miles of territory and that the commerce carried on the Father of Waters and its tributaries equals practically one-half the tonnage of American seaports.

Yet, according to a report just prepared by the United States Shipping Board, through the Bureau of Operations, in cooperation with the Board of Engineers of the Army, the Mississippi and its feeder streams drain an area equaling two-fifths of the United States. The navigable channels of these vast waterways approach 15,000 miles in length, over which are borne the products of agriculture and industry in constantly increasing volume.

The recent completion by the United States Engineer Corps of the canalization project for the Ohio River, which, with its 50 locks and dams provides a 9-foot channel from Pittsburgh to Cairo, a distance of nearly 1,000 miles, makes the route available for the commerce of a vast region through the Ohio and the Mississippi to all the ports of the world. Some idea of the importance of this comparatively small portion of the inland waterway system may be gleaned from the fact that during the year 1928 there were transported upward of 46,000,000 tons of freight on the Ohio.

"There is every indication," says the report, "that inland waterways are steadily assuming greater and greater importance in the country's transportation structure. This is shown not only by traffic figures but also by the continuance on a larger scale than ever of the aid rendered to the cause of river improvement by the Federal Government, as well as by plans announced for the extension of private and common carrier service, by the many substantial contracts awarded for new equipment, and by the building of municipal terminals."

Altogether the report paints a very optimistic picture of the prospects for internal waterway navigation, and it is evident that even the present large volume of river traffic will be greatly exceeded in the not distant future.

EXPERT TRAFFIC ADVICE.

The senatorial investigation of local traffic conditions has not made much progress, largely because the committee has concerned itself too much with details. But now action is promised. Yesterday, after listening to conflicting reports and suggestions from various officials having authority over traffic in one respect or another, the committee decided to call upon William Phelps Eno, of this city, for expert advice. Mr. Eno is internationally known as a traffic engineer.

It is no secret that Mr. Eno is directly opposed to many of the practices and principles adopted for the regulation of local traffic. He does not believe that it is sound practice, for example, to attempt to regulate the flow of vehicles with automatic devices, and he is not a supporter of the so-called rotary left-hand turn. If Mr. Eno should appear before the Senate committee as an expert adviser, it is certain that he will give the local traffic office plenty of work.

It is always desirable to call in experts in connection with technical problems as intricate and involved as traffic regulation. It will be most interesting to hear Mr. Eno's comments upon the traffic system of Washington.

RESTORATION OF WAKEFIELD.

Mount Vernon, George Washington's homestead, has been saved and will be preserved in perpetuity as a shrine for the American people. Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, stands restored and is the mecca of thousands annually. But Wakefield, where George Washington was born, has yet to be rescued from decay and oblivion. This work has been undertaken by the Wakefield National Association, of which Mrs. Harry Lee Rust, of this city, is president.

The Wakefield National Association, by virtue of the act of Congress of June 7, 1926, possesses the right to reconstruct historic Wakefield. It has purchased 67 acres of the original estate and has contracted to purchase an additional 31 acres. Plans for reconstruction of the mansion and the adjoining kitchen house have been completed.

Money can not be more worthily expended than in connection with the acquisition and restoration of the birthplace of Washington. The people of the United States should regard it as a privilege to become sharers in the restoration of Wakefield.

SCRAPPING OLD SHIPS.

New York Herald Tribune.

President Hoover's decision to do away with 19 of our 22 second-line cruisers is the most helpful tangible step taken with regard to the Navy since he became President. The oldest of these ships, the Olympia, has 38 years of service behind her; the youngest is the Salem, which is 21. The total tonnage thus removed from the list is about 164,875. Three old cruisers will be kept in service—the Rochester, which was built in 1890 and displaces 8,150 tons, and the Denver and the Galveston, each of 3,200 tons, and built, respectively, in 1900 and 1901. They will be used for that "police" work of which so much has recently been said, and will see service in Latin-American waters, where they will be used as a visible and easily understood symbol of the ability of the United States to speak in defense of its rights.

Compared with any modern cruisers, these three ships and those about to be eliminated are worse than nothing. They are useful solely as tangible examples of the best definition of an obsolete vessel—one which can neither fight nor run away. Possessing either of these two factors, a vessel can be useful in certain cases, either with a fleet or in convoying and destroying merchant vessels. Without either of them, there is only a floating death trap.

The President's decision to eliminate them is noteworthy for three reasons. In the first place, it removes a set of vessels which are positively dangerous except for very limited types of service. In the second place, his decision will save the American taxpayers many millions of dollars when it no longer becomes necessary to man and maintain these ships. This fact alone should have a strong appeal to the country, as it is the first actual money saving on the Navy accomplished during the present administration, and is a very considerable one to boot.

Finally, the decision clears the air so far as the current Anglo-American naval negotiations are concerned, for British naval authorities have all along been prone to count these aged warhorses as a part of our actual cruiser strength, whereas, of course, they are more of a disadvantage than an advantage. Now that they are to be out of the Navy, the world must of necessity realize that our actual cruiser strength is lower than that of France or Japan, and that where the British now have 52 cruisers, displacing 311,991 tons, we have only 10 cruisers, displacing 70,500 tons. The answer has been obvious—we must build; it has fortunately been made all the more obvious by President Hoover's wise action in removing these ancient ships.

IGNORING STOP SIGNS.

There is a growing feeling that the city, town and State police should pay more attention to motorists who ignore stop signs. They are among the worst menaces with which law-abiding motorists have to deal, according to the Indianapolis News. Relatively few drivers disobey the signal lights, partly for their own safety and because a policeman may be near at hand. More of them disregard stop signs at preferential streets and boulevards. Many pay no attention to the stop signs erected by the Highway Commission on side roads leading to main highways. This failure has caused many accidents. Four persons were killed near Kokomo when a car swerved into a truck to avoid striking an automobile that had been driven from a side road and which, witnesses said, did not stop. As a rule the speed of cars using the main road is much faster than that of the machines approaching such thoroughfares, so it is easier for the side-road traffic to stop. When a driver who has the right of way attempts to avoid an accident that threatens because somebody has disregarded a stop sign he often suffers great damage because his speed is high.

RAIN.

"Rain!" cried a frightened little child.
The thirsty earth looked up and smiled.

"Rain!" said a man who feared a cold.
The earth drank all that it could hold.

A woman slammed a window pane,
The brown earth reveled in the rain.

The humans put umbrellas up,
The lawns made many a bowl and cup.

"Rain," said the throngs in accents glum,
The earth rejoiced that it had come!

The Eagle Flies High, But He Has Little Company Up There.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

CLIMBING is hard work, whether done on a mountain side or in business, and few reach the top. The higher you go, the less company you have.

That is the penalty of success. Every upward step costs you a friend, and when you reach the top you are almost alone.

Even a small success reduces the number of your familiars. You move into a better house and begin to spend more money, and at once lose contact with those who can not keep your pace.

It isn't your fault. You would keep the old friends if you could. But they are envious or proud, and will no longer count you as one of them.

You must make new friends at your new level of prosperity, and the stiffness of the climb has left a small company from which to choose.

If you climb higher still and build a great house or buy a yacht, you must enjoy these luxuries alone. However generous you may be, you can find no guests.

The few who have climbed equally high have houses and yachts equally fine and empty. They can not be your guests, for they are trying to enjoy their own possessions and are as hungry for guests as you are. And the scores that would have enjoyed your hospitality when you were poor are now frightened away by your grandeur. They can not dress for dinner and would feel ill-at-ease in your great house.

Success has doomed you to be lonely as it dooms all men. You have lost contact with the crowd.

To say that wealth does not make happiness is to express a half-truth. A little wealth gives happiness to those who are in need. But much wealth more often destroys happiness, for normal men get their pleasure from their fellows and money makes them unhappy by driving away their friends.

The degree of wealth that contributes to happiness is the exact degree enjoyed by the congenial people of your community. Whether these have much or little you must have as much and no more.

To be poor among the prosperous is to be despised or neglected and denied fellowship. To be prosperous among the poor is to be envied and treated as an alien.

If you would be happy you must keep up with the neighbors to win their respect and your own; but if fortune smiles on you, conceal your riches as you once concealed poverty, or you will experience no more of fellowship.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Boston's Literary Paul Revere.

("Strange Interlude" barred by Boston Mayor.—News Item.)

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere;
Of a modern Revere who was ultrapure
(And so was his excellent horse, I'm sure).
He said to his friend, "If Eugene O'Neil
By land or sea should arrive tonight
Have a lantern aloft, for I seem to feel
That to let him enter would not be right—
One, if a book, and two, if a play,
And I on the opposite shore will stay
Ready to ride and spread the alarm
To every Middlesex village and farm
To see that the public is kept from harm."
Then he said "Good night, and watch out, too,
For Carl Van Vechten and all that crew—
For Sinclair Lewis and H. G. Wells
And anything Jim Tully sells,
For Vina Delmar (and keep an eye, sir,
For any approach by Theodore Dreiser)!"

• • • •

Meanwhile his friend, through alley and street
Wanders and watches, all eyes and ears,
Till in the silence around he hears
The Theater Guild's at the city door,
The bang of trunks and the tramp of feet
And the news confirming his gravest fear—
"Strange Interlude coming . . . and maybe more!"

• • • •

Then he climbed to the tower of the Old North Church
By the wooden stairs, with stealthy tread,
To the belfry chamber overhead
And felt, of a sudden, the belfry lurch
For 'twas all jammed up with censors who Were all determined to signal, too.

• • • •

Meanwhile areading "Red Riding Hood"
Aloud to his horse, which was sweet and good,
On the opposite shore stood Paul Revere.
Now he patted his horse's side
Now gazed at the landscape far and near;
Then addressing his mount he said,
"Old Bean,
You've your faults, I know, but your mind is clean;"
But mostly he watched with eager search
The belfry tower of Old North Church,
And lo! as he looks at the belfry's heights
His startled eyes see a flock of lights!

• • • •

It was twelve by the village clock
When he crossed the bridge into Medford town;
He gave the villagers a shock
And brought them bounding out with zeal
By crying: "Arise! Eugene O'Neil
Is coming! Get your rifles down!"

• • • •

It was one by the village clock
When he galloped into Lexington,
"Get up!" he cried with accent rude,
"Or you'll all get 'Strange Interlude.'"

• • • •

It was two by the village clock
When he came to the bridge down Concord way;
"Get up!" he yelled, "or by Plymouth Rock
You'll be getting a book by Hemingway!"
You know the rest. Through the press you've heard
Of the battle for censorship absurd;
How the censors barred each book, each show
That wasn't as white as the driven snow;
How they stripped the magazines quite thin
And wouldn't let H. L. Mencken in.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Cuba the Goose That Lays Golden Eggs for Uncle Sam—Now He Wants to See Where Gold Originates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The theme of this letter is that Cuba is the goose that lays the golden eggs for the United States, and the United States seems to be about to kill the goose in the hope of finding out where the gold originates.

On May 20, 1902, Gen. Leonard Wood walked with his soldiers on Cuban soil onto United States vessels and by that act the United States nominally left Cuba to her own devices and began to proclaim to the world how generous we are to weak and defenseless little nations. We point with pride to our gift of Cuba to the Cubans, but we soft-pedal on the song of how much we have made Cuba pay for what we claim to have given gratis. We have interfered innumerable times in Cuban internal affairs just because she was small and defenseless. We complain of Cuba's inept government, forgetting that Cuba is better governed today, 27 years after receiving her alleged freedom, than was the United States in 1816, which was 27 years after Washington inaugurated the United States. We forget that only as recently as 1812-1814 the British had sacked Washington and driven the United States out of its home. Who are we to throw rocks at Cuba? Can we deny that Cuba is a better country today than we were at the same period of our own nationality? We forget that when we made peace with England at that time, England did not even promise to desist from boarding our merchant ships and impressing seamen to serve under the British flag.

Worse yet is the circumstance that through the reciprocity treaty we have been taking more money out of Cuba than we ever got out of any of our territories and dependencies. From the incidence of the reciprocity treaty in December, 1903, to and including the year 1928, Cuban commodities which were imported into the United States have paid customs duties amounting to $2,027,891,000. This amount of over two billions of dollars is nearly equal to 10 per cent of the entire original cost of the World War to the United States, and, of course, a much larger percentage of what the cost will prove to be after we get through collecting from Europe.

Of course, somebody is bound to retort that in the meantime Cuba was collecting import duties on commodities shipped from the United States. So it was. The total of such collections was $446,102,771 in the same period of time. Thus in our generosity we repaid to Cuba less than 25 per cent of what we took away from her. But we still owe Cuba a balance of over one and one-half billions of dollars—$1,581,788,229, to be exact. To state the thing in another way, we fed the Cuban goose a good deal less than half a billion dollars' worth of poultry feed to get golden eggs worth more than two billions of dollars. The gesture of charity (sic) to Cuba has netted a tidy profit of over 300 per cent to the United States.

Apparently it has been so easy to get these golden eggs, that our cupidity has been whetted and we are now proposing to try to get more by the simple expedient of increasing the duty on sugar 25 per cent. In the seven years from the passage of the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922, Cuban sugar alone contributed $920,000,000 or 22 per cent of approximately customs revenues collected in the United States. This was an average of $132,000,000 per annum. No other country's products were so heavily penalized. It is now proposed in the Senate tariff bill to boost Cuba's annual contribution to $155,000,000.

Bob Quillen in Bad Again—College Rules Must Be Enforced for the Benefit of Students.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article published in The Post last Saturday, written by Robert Quillen, is an affront to all men and women connected with educational institutions, and is detrimental to the proper training of boys and girls.

It does not seem possible that intelligent men and women placed at the head of the various colleges would deliberately or otherwise make a lot of foolish rules for the students to obey. One particular college might have one or two unnecessary rules, but the very fact that certain rules are found in the statutes of all colleges is sufficient proof that these rules were made for the benefit of the students. These rules might, however, appear absurd to a man who has had no experience in managing young people.

Mr. Quillen's article has the tendency to poison the minds of the younger generation toward authority. It should, therefore, never have found its way to the press.

Coast to Coast in Two Hours, Says Buddy Newhouse, Private First Class—But, Shucks, People Won't Believe It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I just saw printed in your paper dated September 3, the article on a plane that made 240 flights from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean in 36 successive days, and I thought that was pretty good, because every word of it is the truth. But there are people back in the States who will think different about it and some won't believe it even if you did prove it.

I would like to see something in your paper about the Panama Railroad, that runs from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific Coast in two (2) ho Many people back in the States would say that is untrue. But I have the train and the railroad company to prove what I say.

Time for Fall Musical Fete Draws Near

Percy Lee Atherton's Appointment Center of Interest.

By JEAN ELIOT.

WITH the autumn music festival in the chamber music auditorium of the Library of Congress coming on apace, there is considerable interest in the appointment of Mr. Percy Lee Atherton, Boston music critic, to the post of the music division of the library. He is a brother of Mr. Frederic Atherton, of Washington, who has been tremendously interested in the development of this stimulating music center in the Capital and whose wife—to digress considerably—is one of the handsomest and most distinguished looking women in Washington society. Mr. Percy Lee Atherton has been staying in the White Mountains and a group of his friends there gave a dinner for him the other evening in anticipation of his starting for Washington to take up his new work.

Mr. Carl Engel has for years been head of the music division of the Library of Congress and, with the exception of Mrs. Frederick Coolidge, who built the chamber music auditorium, is the one who has done most toward assuring the success of a venture which actually marks Uncle Sam's first actual participation in strictly cultural activities. He will retain a sort of directorial supervision over the work, but he has undertaken very important work for a music publishing house which will require his presence in New York much of the time, so Mr. Atherton has been chosen to carry on here.

Presumably Mrs. Coolidge will come to Washington for the music festival, which is set for October 7, 8 and 9. A woman who has probably done more than any other in this country to develop the talents of modern composers and to bring them before the public, she organized the Berkshire music festivals, long internationally famous. And since the Elizabeth Shurtleff Coolidge Auditorium at the library was opened, she has scarcely missed coming to town for the festivals held there.

There will be morning, afternoon and evening concerts while the festival is in progress, most of them chamber music programs, but the closing event on the evening of October 9 is to be a more ambitious concert, with Mr. Leopold Stokowski, dynamic leader of the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducting. Features of this program are to be a Bach fugue, with Mr. Linwood Farnum at the organ, and a concerto by Hindenmith in which harpsichords will be used with such players as Mr. Frank Bibb, often heard at the White House in the Coolidge regime, and Mr. Louis Richard, who is said to be a protegee of the present Mistress of the White House.

"Our Mrs. Coolidge"—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge—used always to attend at least one concert of the music festivals and it is probable that Mrs. Hoover, who is likewise a music lover, will be present this time.

No date has been fixed, but assurances that the engagement would be included in Miss MacDonald's program have been received by Miss Anderson, who took the matter up with the British Embassy in the absence from Washington of Miss Abbott, who is taking a brief vacation at her home in Nebraska.

Guests at the luncheon will include the women at the heads of bureaus, or otherwise prominent in the work of the Federal Government departments in Washington, and Miss MacDonald thus will have an opportunity to meet and discuss with them the activities in their various fields, in which she is keenly interested.

Representative and Mrs. Henry Winfield Watson have arrived in Washington after passing the summer in Norway and Sweden and have reopened their house at 1765 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Watson's daughter, Miss Janet Ball, will be a debutante this season, her presentation taking place at a tea dance on December 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Watson.

She will be accompanied to New York by Miss Mildred Hall, one of her little group of secretaries, who handles the work in connection with her Girl Scout activities.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE NEED OF IODINE.

DRINKING water, however rich in iodine it may be, falls far short of supplying the amount of iodine needed by the individual. Therefore, the amount of iodine we get in other ways is important in determining whether we are to be subjected to the hazard of goiter.

Drs. Clark and Adams found that the kidney excretion averaged 41 parts per billion for more than six parts per billion richer in iodine than the drinking water of Massachusetts. The waters of this State contain more than the average amount of iodine. Some iodine is lost through other excretions. When this loss is added to the loss through the kidneys it becomes evident that man must have some considerable source of iodine in addition to drinking water. Pregnant women, growing children and men and women under great emotional strain are those who especially need it. Until recently there was almost no information on foods as comparative sources of iodine. For that matter, it has not been much more than ten years since we first began to receive reports on comparative amounts of iodine in water from different sections of the country.

South Carolina has recently made an extensive report on the iodine content of vegetables grown in that State. McClendon has reported on the iodine content of a few vegetables grown in the Pacific Coast States. The bulletins of the Bureau of Fisheries, United States Department of Commerce, supply some information relative to fish and other sea foods. The Lawrence, Mass., experiment station give the following parts per billion in the average of several tests of the following foods:

Soft shell crabs, 1,032.
Quahaugs (species of clam), 177.
Fresh codfish, 100.1.
Flour, 13.
Milk, 17.
Drinking water, 6.

Comparing 1 point of water with 1 pound each of the other foods, and giving drinking water an iodine value of 1, soft shell crabs has a value of 170; quahaugs, 29; fresh codfish, 16.7; flour, 2, and milk, 3.

We may soon expect similar reports on many other foods.

ABOUT AUTO SUGGESTION.

H. J. K. writes: I am very nervous and flighty, and have been so for 25 or 30 years. I fly off the handle, so to speak, and engage unnecessarily in controversy. I have been agent for the railroad at this station for the last seven years. Lately, while the auditors were checking the station, the subject of smoking came up. They had just eaten lunch and were smoking. They both remarked that tobacco smoke was good, soothing for the nerves, and that was why they took it.

After that I asked two of the business men here in town, and they both said the same thing. I would like your opinion.

REPLY.

There is no physiologic proof that tobacco has any such effect. Physiologists and pharmacists would deny the truth of what you have heard.

And yet there are many who hold the view expressed by these gentlemen. The explanation is that the effect is due to auto suggestion.

IT IS COMMON DISORDER.

R. B. writes: Mother, who is 41, has been having some trouble with her legs. The veins on her left leg are inflamed and have formed into a lump under her knee. The lump feels quite hot and hard. Her doctor advised her to stay in bed until the swelling went down entirely and to take care of her diet, as she is quite stout. This she is doing. If she gets out of bed for a while the lump gets larger.

REPLY.

Apparently your mother has varicose veins. This is a common disorder. Some do nothing about it. Some wear rubber stockings and some are operated on. The injection operation is popular now. The stay-in-bed cure, for one thing, is too expensive. It wastes time, muscles and money.

What Today Means to You

SEPTEMBER 25

"LIBRA."

IF September 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 6 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8:50 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

The influences for this date are more favorable from a material standpoint, than a mental or spiritual one. There will be no spectacular developments, but consistent progress will be made. Mentally and spiritually, you will feel "down in the mouth."

The child born on this September 25 will have a pliable nature, but on occasion will be perverse. It will be fastidious and like beautiful and artistic surroundings. It will be very demonstrative in its affections.

By nature you are not a hard worker—you are physically lazy, but mentally active, if you can think in comfort. Ambition and pride may spur you on until you have succeeded in securing the luxuries of life, but you have no desire to "die in harness." You work for your comforts, you will "feather your nest," but here your ambitions end. Inactivity treated as a cushion that can be cast aside at will, has its uses, but when it becomes a bath chair, it is a burden and a bore to most people. A continued life of ease and leisure would never bore you—you are an intelligent loafer.

You dislike being compelled to do things, you resent restrictions. You enjoy pursuing your hobbies, for you can drop them or pick them up as you choose. You are willing to expend considerable energy upon something to which there are no strings attached.

You are a philosopher, dreamer and theorist. You are an interesting conversationalist, and you enjoy talking to all types of people in all sorts of places. You like to sit on the sidelines and study life, you like to study people and their reactions to things. You have a superior intellect going to waste.

Successful people born September 25:

Alfred Vail—Inventor.
William Le B. Jenney—Architect.
Vinnie Ream Hoxie—Sculptor.

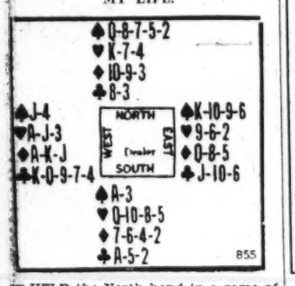
WORK ON BRIDGE

PARTNERS WHO HAVE SADDENED MY LIFE.



I HELD the North hand in a game of Auction Bridge. My partner (South) properly passed and West bid one No Trump, which obtained the contract. (In Contract West and East probably would have bid up to three No Trumps.)

There are some players who would have bid No Trump with my partner's (South's) hand, but a ten count is too weak to justify an original No Trump. It will be noted that had my partner made the bid that the adversaries would have taken a heavy toll in penalties, especially if, as might have happened, West had doubled and East had made a business pass.

I led my fourth best Spade, my partner won the trick and returned the suit. Of course, I played small on the second trick, thus saving one Spade trick; but in spite of that, Declarer won four Clubs, three Diamonds, one Heart and two Spades, making his game with a total of ten tricks.

Why did I feel as if I had been divorced from happiness?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

My partner should have seen at a glance that there was no sense in returning my Spade suit. In Whist there was a saying that the only excuse for not returning partner's trump lead were sudden death or having none of the suit; and when playing a No Trump any original lead has the significance of a trump lead at Whist, but in Whist there was no exposed dummy to indicate when to depart from a usually sound rule. In this case my partner should have seen the futility of continuing the Spades and have shifted to his own Heart suit. Holding Queen-Ten-Eight, and noting that dummy's highest Heart was the Nine, his best lead would have been the Ten.

Look at the four hands and note what would have happened if my partner had led the Ten of Hearts to trick 2. West would have played the Jack and I would have won with the King and returned the suit. My partner would have held the Queen-Eight fourchette over East's Nine, and the Ace would have been the only Heart trick Declarer would have taken. We would have won three Heart tricks, which with my partner's two Aces would have given us the five tricks needed to save game.

"IN THE PLAYHOUSE"

by JOHN J. DALY

Newspaper celebrities galore are in town attending the world's premiere of "June Moon," at the Belasco. There are plenty notables amongst the home-town confraternity—but the New York contingent sent down additional troops to support the efforts of Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman, authors of the new play, and both members of this club.

* * * *

In the cast of "June Moon," and making her debut on the stage, is Florence Rice, daughter of the world's fine sporting writer, Grantland Rice. Her mother and father here to witness her first steps on stage, as they watched her toddling not so long ago, Miss Rice covers herself with glory in her first part. A girl of singular beauty, she comes by this naturally—for her mother, one of the recognized beauties of Georgia, is of the old Hollis family noted for good looks. A happy parentage has given many gifts to Florence Rice—literary ability and an urge for artistic creation from the paternal and this boon to womanhood from the maternal. Tons of beautiful flowers in her dressing room attest the popularity of a young girl starting on what promises to be a glorious career.

* * * *

L. Stoddard Taylor, manager of the Belasco, is all het up over the fact that he has as star of his next week's attraction, William Faversham, who comes to town in a new play by A. E. Thomas and the late Harrison Rhodes, a modern comedy called "Her Friend the King." In the course of more than a quarter of a century in the theater, here and in Chicago and points West,, Mr. Taylor has had the good fortune to meet and know "Favy", as his friends call him. It is Mr. Taylor's belief that the American stage boasts no greater actor, nor finer gentleman. The new play marks Mr. Faversham's return to the lighter field of drawing room comedy. His last appearances in Washington were under the banner of George C. Tyler, who presented Faversham in the title role of "Jim, the Penman", and before that in "Diplomacy." Just previous to these engagements Faversham had played the Keith circuit, when Roland Robbins was manager of the house.

In these days when the theatrical managers are wailing over the high costs of production, when a well-known firm is said to have lost last season $160,000 on a single show, it may prove interesting to rehearse the expenditures of a producer in the era depicted by "The Age of Innocence", the play starring Katharine Cornell at Poli's Theater. The age of innocence in New York City was the decade of the 1870's. At the very end of the period, 1879, Augustin Daly took over the old Broadway Theater for a season of stock. His rent was $14,000 a year. Ada Rehan and John Drew, leading members of the company, each received $35 a week. The total weekly salaries paid out to the seventeen women and fourteen men who supported them was $1,077. The chorus of twenty-three in a musical piece got $248 a week. Stage hands received a total of $235, scenic artists $60, and ushers and house attendants $86. The weekly cost of advertising in sixteen papers came to $300.

Big bond brokers, when issuing information relative to securities listed on the exchanges, usually protect themselves by going back to first sources, giving credit where credit is due. Now comes an advance agent for the shows, Irving S. Strouse, who thus protects himself: "The information contained in this release, although not gusranteed, is taken from sources which I believe to be reliable." Mr. Strouse, with a host of friends in Washington, and therefore well recommended himself, has some glowing tales to tell of the new play, "The Ghost Parade," a mysterious melodrama, booked for Poli's next week.

"The Ghost Parade," written by Hadley Waters, is being produced by Charles K. Gordon, whose outstanding production so far has been "Jarnegan," a success of last season.

The Seven Dials Mystery

A Serial Story By AGATHA CHRISTIE.

THE STORY THUS FAR.

Gerry Wade is found dead in bed at Chimneys, scene of a house party. Seven out of eight alarm clocks placed in his room to awaken him are found up on the mantel. The guests are told that death resulted from an overdose of sleeping powder. Jimmy Thesiger and Bunny Devereux motor to Gerry's home to tell a sister, Loraine, of Wade's death.

Lady Eileen Brent, known as "Bundles," finds a letter Wade had written to his sister making reference to the Seven Dials. Bundle feels certain that Gerry was murdered. En route to London a man, mysteriously shot, staggers into the road in front of Eileen's car. It proves to be Devereux, who, dying, whispers: "Seven Dials * * * fall * * * Jimmy Thesiger."

At Jimmy's quarters Bundle finds Loraine. The three of them set out to trail the murderer. From Capt. Battle at Scotland Yard Bundle obtains a list of secret societies. That evening, with Bill Eversleigh, she visits the Seven Dials Club. A watchman, Alfred, is recognized as a former footman at Chimneys.

Cabinet Minister George Lomax plans a party. He has received a warning letter from the Seven Dials Society. Bundle sets an invitation.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY.

"I've managed it," he said. "Had a lot of trouble with Bill, though. He'd got it into his thick head that I should be a lamb among the wolves. But I have made him see at last. I've got a lot of thingummy bobs now and I'm studying them. You know, blue books and white papers. Deadly dull—but one must do the thing properly. Have you ever heard of the Santa Fe boundary dispute?"

"Never," said Bundle.

"Well, I'm taking special pains with that. It went on for years and was very complicated. I'm making it my subject. Nowadays one has to specialize."

"I've got a lot of the same sort of things," said Bundle. "Aunt Marcia gave them to me."

"Aunt who?"

"Aunt Marcia — father's sister-in-law. She's very political. In fact, she's going to get me invited to George's party."

Unblushing Liars.

"No? Oh, I say, that will be splendid." There was a pause, and then Jimmy said:

"I say, I don't think we'd better tell Loraine that—eh?"

"Perhaps not."

"You see, she mayn't like being out of it. And she really must be kept out of it."

"Yes."

"I mean you can't let a girl like that run into danger!"

Bundle reflected that Mr. Thesiger was slightly deficient in tact. The prospect of her running into danger did not seem to give him any qualms whatever.

"Have you gone away?" asked Jimmy.

"No, I was only thinking."

"I see. I say, are you going to the inquest tomorrow?"

"Yes; are you?"

"Yes. By the way, it's in the evening papers. But tucked away in a corner. Funny—I should have thought they'd have made rather a splash about it."

"Yes—so should I."

"Well," said Jimmy, "I must be getting on with my task. I've just got to where Bolivia sent us a note."

"I suppose I must get on with my little lot," said Bundle. "Are you going to swot at it all the evening?"

"I think so. Are you?"

"Oh probably. Good night."

They were both liars of the most unblushing order. Jimmy Thesiger knew perfectly well that he was taking Loraine Wade out to dinner.

As for Bundle, no sooner had she rung off than she attired herself in various nondescript garments belonging, as a matter of fact, to her maid. And having donned them, she sallied out on foot, deliberating whether bus or tube would be the best route by which to reach the Seven Dials Club.

The Seven Dials Club.

BUNDLE reached 14 Hunstanton street about 6 p. m. At that hour, as she rightly judged, the Seven Dials Club was a dead spot Bundle's aim was a simple one. She intended to get hold of the former footman, Alfred. She was convinced that, once she got hold of him, the rest would be easy. Bundle had a simple automatic method of dealing with retainers. It seldom failed, and she saw no reason why it should fail now.

The only thing of which she was not certain was how many people inhabited the club premises. Naturally, she wished to disclose her presence to as few people as possible.

Whilst she was hesitating as to her best line of attack the problem was solved for her in a singularly easy fashion. The door of No. 14 opened and Alfred himself came out.

"Good afternoon, Alfred," said Bundle pleasantly.

Alfred jumped.

"Oh! good afternoon, your ladyship. I—I didn't recognise your ladyship for a moment."

Paying a tribute in her own mind to her maid's clothing, Bundle proceeded to business.

"I want a few words with you, Alfred. Where shall we go?"

"Well—really, my lady—I won't know—it's not what you might call a nice part round here—I don't know, I'm sure——"

Bundle cut him short.

"Who's in the club?"

"No one at present, my lady."

"Then we'll go in there."

Alfred produced a key and opened the door. Bundle passed in. Alfred, troubled and sheepish, followed her. Bundle sat down and looked straight at the uncomfortable Alfred.

Against the Law.

"I suppose you know," she said crisply, "that what you're doing here is dead against the law?"

Alfred shifted uncomfortably from one foot to the other.

"It's true as we've been raided twice," he admitted. "But nothing compromising was found, owing to the neatness of Mr. Mosgorovsky's arrangements."

"I'm not talking of the gambling only," said Bundle. "There's more than that—probably a great deal more than you know. I'm going to ask you a direct question, Alfred, and I should like the truth, please. How much were you paid for leaving Chimneys?"

Alfred looked twice round the cornice, as though seeking for inspirations, swallowed three or four times and then took the inevitable course of a weak will opposed to a strong one.

"It was this way, your ladyship. Mr Mosgorovsky, he come with a party to visit Chimneys on one of the show days.

"Mr. Tredwell, he was indisposed like—an ingrowing toenail as a matter of fact—so it fell to me to show the parties over. At the end of the tour, Mr. Mosgorovsky, he stays behind the rest, and after giving me something handsome, he falls into conversation."

"Yes," said Bundle encouragingly.

"And the long and short of it was," said Alfred, with a sudden acceleration of his narrative, "that he offers me a hundred pounds down to leave that instant minute and to look after this here club. He wanted someone as was used to the best families—to give the place a tone, as he put it. And, well, it seemed flying in the face of Providence to refuse—let alone that the wages I get here are just three times what they were as second footman."

"A hundred pounds," said Bundle. "That's a very large sum, Alfred. Did they say anything about who was to fill your place at Chimneys?"

"I demurred a bit, my lady, about leaving at once. As I pointed out, it wasn't usual and might cause inconvenience. But Mr. Mosgorovsky he knew of a young chap—been in good service and ready to come any minute. So I mentioned his name to Mr. Tredwell and everything was settled pleasant like."

Bundle nodded. Her own suspicions had been correct, and the modus operandi was much as she had thoughts it to be. She essayed a further inquiry.

Who is Mr. Mosgorovsky?"

"Gentleman as runs this club; a Russian gentleman. A very clever gentleman, too."

Bundle abandoned the getting of information for the moment and proceeded to other matters.

"A hundred pounds is a very large sum of money, Alfred."

"Larger than I ever handled, my lady," said Alfred with simple candor.

"Did you ever suspect that there was something wrong?"

"Wrong, my lady?"

"Yes. I'm not talking about the gambling. I mean something far more serious. You don't want to be sent to penal servitude, do you, Alfred?"

"Oh, Lord, my lady, you don't mean it?"

"I was at Scotland Yard the day before yesterday," said Bundle impressively. "I heard some very curious things. I want you to help me, Alfred, and if you do, well—if things go wrong, I'll put in a good word for you."

"Anything I can do, I shall be only too pleased, my lady. I mean, I would anyway."

"Well, first," said Bundle, "I want to go all over this place—from top to bottom."

Accompanied by a mystified and scared Alfred, she made a very thorough tour of inspection. Nothing struck her eye till she came to the gaming room. There she noticed an inconspicuous door in a corner, and the door was locked.

Alfred explained readily.

"That's used as a getaway, your ladyship. There's a room and a door on to a staircase what comes out in the next street. That's the way the gentry goes when there's a raid."

"But don't the police know about it?"

"It's a cunning door, you see, my lady. Looks like a cupboard, that's all."

Bundle felt a rising excitement.

"I must get in here," she said.

Alfred shook his head.

"You can't, my lady; Mr. Mosgorovsky, he has the key."

"Well," said Bundle, "there are other keys."

The Meeting Place.

She perceived that the lock was a perfectly ordinary one which probably could be easily unlocked by the key of one of the other doors. Alfred, rather troubled, was sent to collect likely specimens. The fourth that Bundle tried fitted. She turned it, opened the door and passed through.

She found herself in a small, dingy apartment. A long table occupied the center of the room with chairs ranged round it. There was no other furniture in the room. Two built-in cupboards stood on either side of the fireplace. Alfred indicated the nearer one with a nod.

"That's it," he explained.

I want to tell you how I coaxed him to eat—

If you are tired—lack pep—if your skin is not clear—if your appetite is "gone"—you owe it to yourself and friends to try S.S.S. Its tonic effects will surprise you.

"Once I was worried"

Mealtime was getting on my nerves. I prepared many appetizing dishes, but John simply would not eat—just "minced" at his food. Perhaps sometimes a little grouchy. I began to fear he was 'slipping.' What was I to do? Love, home, happiness, business success—all depended upon an improvement in his condition. The blood tonic idea suggested itself to me. My Druggist recommended S.S.S. He told me that S.S.S. was a great blood tonic; that it had been successful for over 100 years; that it was made from fresh vegetable drugs and would not harm the most delicate system. Also that it would build up the blood and improve the processes by which the body is nourished. I brought home a large size bottle. John agreed to try it. Well, in just a few days I could see the difference. His improvement has been so rapid he is going to take several more bottles, and not only that, but he is now telling his friends to take S.S.S."

Loss of appetite only a symptom

It is a known fact that when one's system gets "run-down," they haven't the resistance to ward off diseases. Loss of appetite is only a symptom. General weakness pervades the entire body. There is no desire to work or play.

Rich, red blood builds sturdy health

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get your blood cells back up to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, rheumatism, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again, sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady.

S.S.S. is daily helping people regain their strength and charm. Thousands of users have testified to its benefits in unsolicited letters of gratitude. It helps Nature build red-blood-cells. It gives to Nature what it needs in making you feel like yourself again.

All Drug Stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

Dear Mr. Grogan:
We thought that you might be interested to know the results we have received from the advertisement we have been running in the Washington POST since September 3rd.
We have sold seventy (70) rooms, increasing our revenue over four thousand ($4,000.00) a month, or about $50,000.00 a year. Nearly all of our small apartments have been sold and the large ones are going very rapidly.... Ninety per cent of the people who make inquiries for accomodations refer to the advertisement we are running in the POST.
We have been running both classified and display advertisements and are unable to tell you which type ad pulls the strongest.
Thanking you heartily for your splendid co-operation, we remain

"90% Refer to POST Advertising"

It is always a good plan to use both classified and display advertisements because classified ads are read by the people who WANT to buy and have their desires fully defined, while, by the use of display ads, you may create a desire to buy in the minds of those who do not realize their need of what you have for sale . . . Both types are equally powerful in relation to their sphere in The Washington Post.

Buying decisions are made in the morning—in the hours composed of Vita-Minutes—for it is then that minds are freshest and bodies more alert, when people are most easily spurred to action. Letters similar to the above reproduction are the rule rather than the exception among Post advertisers because this newspaper not only reaches its thousands of readers in the morning hours, but appeals to the type of people who are ABLE to satisfy their desires for finer living quarters or for new products or services.

Whatever you may have to sell, you will find that maximum results can be obtained at minimum cost in "The Capital's Greatest NEWSpaper"

Little Visits in Asia

III. GODS OF THE HINDUS

MOST of the people of India are called "Hindus." This name means that they are members of the native Aryan race, or else that they believe in the faith of Hinduism. About 230,000,000 persons are classed as Hindus. That is more people than there are in North and South America combined!

A Hindu Temple.

The Hindus believe in three chief gods—Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. They also believe in goddesses.

In India there is a holy city called Benares. About 200,000 persons live there the year around, and its streets are always thronged by visitors. Benares is just as sacred to the Hindus as Mecca is to the Mohammedans. Each year it is estimated that 1,000,000 pilgrims come to Benares—some of them traveling long distances on foot.

After arriving at Benares, a pilgrim usually makes a walking trip around the city. During this trip he visits "the five holy places" and covers a distance of 45 miles. The trip may last for six days.

Brahma, the chief god, is pictured as having four heads and four arms. His wife is the goddess of music and speech. When a Hindu has told lies, he prays that the wife of Brahma shall forgive him.

The wife of Siva is believed to be a cruel goddess. She is supposed to rule over death, and people fear her anger.

The Hindus consider many animals sacred. Chief among these are monkeys, apes and cattle. Bulls are allowed to roam about Benares at their own free will. There is a "monkey temple" where members of the monkey tribe have everything their own way.

The Ganges River flows by Benares. This is supposed to be a sacred river; and every morning before breakfast thousands of persons go in to bathe. By saying prayers while they are getting wet, the bathers believe that they can wash away their sins.

Programs by British Seen Near in U.S.

Hope for Definite Schedule of Rebroadcasts Is Growing Rapidly; Tests Are Being Made Hourly Over Radio.

Hope for the technical practicality of a definite schedule of rebroadcasts from England becomes more pronounced each time such a program goes on the air, according to engineers of the National Broadcasting Co.

Tests recorded almost hourly for the past two years have smoothed away many of the earliest difficulties and are pointing the way toward a hoped-for solution of present problems, it was explained.

One thing the experiments have very clearly established, according to C. W. Horn, general engineer for the company, is the importance of time. It has been definitely determined that while reception from England on a certain wavelength may not be possible at 9 o'clock in the morning, it might be almost perfect on that same wavelength at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Horn said.

Ultimate Goal Far Away.

"We are still far from the ultimate goal of perfection," the engineer declared. "However, we have solved many of the problems and our experiments are becoming more fruitful each day.

"These experiments will be continued until we can give to American listeners events of international interest with customary good quality."

Horn explained that during the long experimental period, during which four British programs have been placed on the air, each with more success than the one before, the National Broadcasting Co. has had the full cooperation of the British Broadcasting Corporation. "This cooperation includes exchange of engineering data and the conducting of frequent tests," the engineer said.

Much has been learned about foreign reception since the Radio Corporation of America's experimental short wave station at Riverhead, Long Island, began to function, according to the experts. But much still remains to be found out before satisfactory signal strength can be promised for any definite hour of the day or night.

In addition to the time element known to be involved it is known that the season of the year will also affect radio reception over the Atlantic. A large amount of data is being gathered continually on this subject, it was pointed out.

The engineer explained that a "heavy air pressure area" over the Atlantic, which varies during the day and night, has a very decided effect on the radio signals. Just how this effect can be utilized to best advantage, has not fully been determined, but the solution can not be far away now that the condition has been discovered, he said.

Programs Come From 5SW.

All British programs received by the National Broadcasting Co. come from 5SW, at Chelmsford, about 30 miles northeast of London, where the British Broadcasting Corporation's key station, 2LO, is located. 5SW is an experimental transmitting station of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The programs rebroadcast in the past have been received on a wave length of 25.53 meters, although other waves are also used because of their carrying ability.

Although one or two attempts were made several years ago to rebroadcast British programs, the most ambitious effort was made February 1 of this year, when a symphony concert from 2LO was placed on a coast-to-coast network.

The program followed an address by Calvin Coolidge, then President of the United States, during the dedication of the Bok Bird Carillon, in Florida.

The wizardry of modern radio next took American listeners to London early in the morning of July 7, when a thanksgiving service in Westminster Abbey for the recovery of King George was broadcast through a nation-wide network. At the conclusion of this program listening Americans heard the voice of an Australian announcer say: "Sydney calling. Helly, Montreal."

This was picked up from station VX2ME, in Sydney by the Pittsburgh laboratories of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and conveyed to New York and land wires.

Both the following London rebroadcasts came as a surprise to American listeners. Late in the afternoon of September 5 a program originating in the New York studios was interrupted by the announcement that a program from London would be broadcast.

Almost instantly a typically British voice issued from radio speakers in thousands of homes in eighteen cities throughout the United States. He was introducing Gloria Swanson, famed motion picture actress, who came on the air with a song a few minutes later. She also spoke briefly, commenting on her latest picture recently completed in England.

The highlight of English radio reception, to date, however, came two days later when an hour's description of the Schneider cup races over the River Solent, off Calshot, was placed on an extensive network at 8:05 o'clock in the morning.

The earlier portion of this broadcast was voted by engineers, newspaper critics and listeners alike as the best so far received over speakers in this country.

"About everything that can happen to a radio wave happens to the short waves such as are used for these transatlantic transmissions," said Horn. "There are fading, side band interference, distortion and other difficulties. Some of these have been partially overcome by using a large array of specially designed antennae which covers acres of ground, and by means of automatic selective receiving equipment. This arrangement makes possible the reception of good signals when only weak and poor signals are received on ordinary antennae and receiving equipment. Directional receiving apparatus has helped a lot to reduce interference from static and other disturbances."

All British programs received so far have traveled practically the same route. No matter from what point they originate, they are handled through the BBC's key station, 2LO. From there they are sent by land wire to Chelmsford. After the usual transformation they are hurtled on their 3,300-mile path across the Atlantic to the RCA receiving station at Riverhead.

After the necessary treatment there the programs are again put on land wires and sent to the NBC New York control room. There they follow the usual course of any other broadcast originating outside the building and are distributed to whatever network may be available at the moment.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

September 25.

FELICIA HEMANS, the famous English poet, was born this day, 1793, in Liverpool. Miss Hemans displayed the bent of her genius at an early age.

Chief among her works are "The Restoration of the Works of Art to Italy," "The Skeptic," "Modern Greece," "The Songs of the Affections," "Forest Sanctuary," "Lays of Many Lands" and "Dartmoor." Her poetry is essentially lyrical and descriptive. She produced many short poems of great beauty and pathos.

Mercy Otis Warren, patriot writer of Colonial times, was born this day, 1728. One of her important works was a drama satirizing British and Tory leaders. Her chief work, however, was a three-volume history of the American Revolution which contains character sketches of great value. Her husband, Jonas Warren, was a prominent leader in the Revolution.

Dare Interprets the Mode

ONE of the most delightful features of Paris life, if you have any fondness for the arts in any form whatsoever, is the continuous succession of expositions. Leaving out of it the hundreds of private exhibitions of individual artists' works in the little galleries dotting the city, there are always six, eight or ten expositions of dire scope.

Expositions of painting, of the decorative arts, of home furnishing, of the mode, of hair dressing, of advertising art—we could fill this column without listing them all.

One of this summer's most interesting exhibits has been the expositions of gems, jewelry and the goldsmith's art at the Musee Galliera, one of the municipal museums.

This exposition attracted exhibits from a large number of outstanding creators of modern French jewelry (which has influenced jewelry fabrication all over the world), such as Georges and Jean Fouquet, Boucheron, Lacloche and Dusausoy.

Taken in connection with previous exhibitions, it shows a remarkable continued advance and progress along new lines in an art that remained stationary for decades and decades.

A particularly interesting feature, and a happy inspiration, was the display, at the same time, of the jewel craft of the young workmen and apprentices who are learning today the difficult and skillful trade they will lead tomorrow.

Clever Fingers Contest.

Why be clever without showing it? What's the fun? Be clever and tell others how—and probably win one of the very lovely Dah-ray prizes! The clever fingers contest is your chance to reward your own cleverness. It's just a matter of typewriting on paper the method of making some one thing, something you feel other women would be interested in knowing.

We don't care how terrible your drawings are—they couldn't be any worse than some of the "rough" sketches we get from Paris. Hurry with your idea—not too much time left!

It was just the way the stitching held it to the figure that intrigued us so! We simply couldn't live without sketching it for you, even though we found we had to live without it—for the time being. It's a combination of several shades of nasturtium, the talent of Jean Patou and the modern silhouette.

Did you ever think you could make a mandarin coat? Yes, you, exactly whether or not you have ever sewn. Send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Washington Post and get an illustrated leaflet telling you how to make a mandarin coat. See how simple it is and that you can really make one!

Affected simplicity is no longer considered a sign of smartness. Intricate simplicity, sophistication, yes. We have returned to the carefully studied silhouette, models as involved as ever were garments of yesteryear—but while yesteryear's garment was fussy and haphazard, today's is studied. A conscious effect, as it were.

The weekly Dare fashion letter appears in the Capital each Sunday exclusively in The Washington Post. Are you looking for it?

A FAMOUS INSTITUTION

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Visiting His Parents.

Some day when our system of education has begun to really educate and fit for life we will regard with more intelligent understanding the now thoroughly misunderstood arrangement known as marriage. At present no one knows just what it is or what it is supposed to be.

Roughly, it seems to be the situation in which two people find themselves when they have decided that they prefer each other to the rest of mankind. And it is a situation that present complications by the minute, for tradition, laws and in-laws conspire to make it about unbearable to the unfortunates most concerned.

For instance, there is the quaint and senseless idea that once "married" two people must follow each other around. In all seriousness, wives inquire whether they should "allow" husbands to take separate vacations, visit sick mothers, go on fishing trips and smoke pipes. No one sees anything ludicrous, inhuman or monstrous in all this. In fact, most people consider that, once married, two people should never be apart until the judge orders it after the regulation five years of discord.

When will we waken to the fact that enforced proximity ends attraction and severs the marriage tie? Enid is an example of the need of scientific training in our colleges and schools in the art of adroit living and harmonious companionship. Enid is intelligent enough to sense injustice, yet she clings to a tradition worthy only of heathen mode of life.

"I am only 20, and married two years," she writes. "My husband is 33, and in my eyes he is perfect. We have a lovely home half paid for, but we are only fairly happy because he keeps longing to see his mother who recently suffered a stroke. For financial reasons he would have to go alone, as the trip would cost at least $600 even for one. And my people simply will not permit me to allow him to go. This breaks my heart, for I know I would die if it were my mother and I was kept from seeing her.

"I can not feel that it is right for my people to oppose it, and if his mother died I fear he would never forgive me and would even lose his love for me. It is out of the question for me to go along. For we must not go in debt, but surely if a man loves his wife he can be trusted to bid his mother a last good-by. Could you write something on the subject that I could show my people? They think it just unheard of for him even have such an idea. Do help us."

"ENID."

How long will such barbarous ideas prevail? How long before sanity will replace insanity where the marriage relation is concerned?

Deodorizing is necessary for complete sanitary protection

Kotex deodorizes . . . and so offers complete protection to women who will not run the risk of offending

YOU simply can't be sure you never give offense . . . unless you use a sanitary pad that deodorizes.

This undainty risk is one that no woman of any pride of person wants to run; so it is not surprising that 9 out of 10 well-dressed women use Kotex.

After all, this precaution is so easy. And Kotex offers so many other superior features!

Kotex is inconspicuous

Kotex, for instance, is non-detectable. Corners are rounded and tapered so no revealing outline can show.

And Kotex offers such a world of comfort . . . more than most women ever dreamed of getting in a sanitary pad.

Kotex is filled with Cellucotton absorbent wadding, a wonderful substance that absorbs 5 times more than cotton . . . thus giving protection without weight or bulk.

Preferred by hospitals

Cellucotton absorbent wadding is the same filler that is used in 85% of the country's leading hospitals for all surgical dressings . . . showing a medical preference you can't afford to overlook.

Please read the column of Kotex superiorities at the right. It tells several important reasons why millions of women all over the world insist on this one sanitary pad.

KOTEX IS SOFT...

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.
2—Safe, secure . . . keeps your mind at ease.
3—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.
4—In hospitals . . . Kotex is the identical material used by surgeons in 85% of the country's leading hospitals.
5—Deodorizes, safely, thoroughly, by a patented process.

WITH ESSO—the Giant Power Fuel—there is no bearing down on the accelerator when you point the car up the hill and give her the gun. Just a feather touch—and it is away.

No anxious waiting for the first "ping ping" of a laboring motor—not with ESSO in your tank. Up and over. They all make it. Little cars. Big cars. Roadsters and sedans. Carbon crusted cars as well. Curb Review

New York, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Stock prices drifted lower in today's Curb Market, with selling pressure quite heavy against some of the recent favorites in the last hour of trading. While many observers were inclined to regard the reaction as a correction of conditions within the market itself, others attributed it to fears of a higher Bank of England discount rate on Thursday, stiffening time money rates and the reported falling off in steel production.

Despite the rather general character of the selling, a fairly long list of issues moved against the general trend, half a dozen or more reaching new high ground. Trading was moderately heavy in volume, the sales falling well below 2,000,000 shares.

Electric Bond & Share, which announced that it would offer eight shares of its stock for five shares of Electric Investors, closed nearly 3 points lower, at 178½, after having touched 183. Electric Investors closed 8 points higher, at 284, although it had touched 292. Revival of strength and activity in Dixie Gas & Utilities was attributed to buying for the account of insiders in anticipation that the company, which is reported to be earning at the rate of $3.50 a share, would benefit by a deal now pending in which the parent concern, United Gas, is involved. United Gas closed fractionally higher, at 40⅝, after having sold within a small fraction of its recent high, 50½.

Further liquidation developed some of the Investment Trust and Trading Corporation issues. Lehman Corporation common, which was called for payment today, sold down from 125½ to 122¼ and rallied to 123⅛, off 1⅜. Goldman Sachs closed fractionally lower, at 115¼, after having touched 118. Blue Ridge convertible preferred sank more than a point to another new low record. Insull Utilities Investors common and preferred and Capital Administration A dropped 3½ to 13 points.

Tampa Electric ran up more than 7 points to a new high at 104½ and retained most of its gain. Cities Service touched another new peak at 89½. Middle West Utilities, which had a spectacular advance yesterday, broke 20¼ points, Standard Power & Light B, and United Corporation warrant, United Gas Improvement, American & Foreign Power warrants, American Gas & Electric and Long Island Lighting all showed declines of 3 points or more.

New low records for the year were established by nearly a score of issues, including Air Investors convertible preferred, Bright Star Electric, Consolidated Instrument, Curtiss-Reed Airplane preferred, Hydroelectric Service, Royal Typewriter, United Stores and Western Air Express, the declines ranging from 1 to 14 points.

Superheater jumped 25 points to a new high at 215, but lost 10 points of its gain. Lane Bryant also reached new high ground.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Notwithstanding Canadian reports of blizzard conditions that appeared likely to interfere with threshing, wheat today dropped to a new low-price record for the season. World's available supplies of wheat showed 21,521,000 bushels increase for the week. Furthermore, Buenos Aires sent word of good rains that would greatly improve the crop prospect for wheat in Argentina.

Closing quotations on wheat were shaky, 1¼c to 1⅞c a bushel below yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅝c to 1⅝c down, oats unchanged to ⅜c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to an equal advance.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat pit here were reached during the late transactions. The final sinking spell came after a rally based on advices that 2 feet of snow had fallen in the Peace River district of Alberta Province, Canada, and that the blizzard was still on. Heavy selling to realize profits developed after the price bulge, however, and the consequent downward swing of the market was given much additional impetus by Winnipeg dispatches saying 50 per cent of Canada's surplus from this year's crop had already been removed from the farms, and that the bulk of Canada's wheat would be delivered within fifteen days.

Contributing to weakness which throughout most of the day was evident in the wheat market here was word of soaking rains in drought regions of Argentina, together with news of more or less moisture relief for spring wheat districts in the American and Canadian Northwest where long-continued subsoil dryness has been a menace. Big arrivals of wheat at Liverpool, and predictions of large deliveries on Liverpool October contracts were also a depressing factor. Export buying of North American wheat today totaled a little more than of late, 500,000 bushels, including some hard winter wheat from the United States, but it was pointed out as significant that numerous vessels are regularly leaving Montreal in ballast, and taking no wheat.

Corn gave way with wheat. Favorable weather prevailing over the corn belt ended also to send corn values down, despite rather pessimistic field reports from various Indiana and Illinois points. Oats displayed relative firmness, receipts of oats being scanty.

Nearby deliveries of lard reached a new low-price record for the season. Tired holders of lard were sellers, influenced by downturns in the value of hogs.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—An early advance on unfavorable features in the weather news and relatively steady Liverpool cables was checked by Southern selling in the cotton market today and was followed by reactions. December, after selling up to 18.78 early, declined to 18.61 or within a point of yesterday's closing quotation, and closed at that figure. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 13 to 18 points on covering or rebuying by some of yesterday's sellers who appeared to be influenced by reports of rains in the Eastern belt, the steadiness abroad and the corrected ginning figures which were published after the close yesterday. There was considerable Southern selling attributed to hedging, but it was readily absorbed by the initial demand, with the active months selling 17 to 22 points net higher during the early trading. This advance carried the price of October up to 18.39 and March to 19.05, but the Southern selling continued, and as soon as the demand slackened, prices turned easire under realizing or reselling by some of the early buyers.

Trading was less active later, and fluctuations during the middle of the day were rather irregular within a comparatively narrow range. Toward the close, however, offerings increased, and the lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading with October selling at 18.24 and March at 18.87, making declines of about 14 to 18 points from the high prices of the morning.

Closing quotations were at the lowest on most months. The liquidation of October contracts in anticipation of notices tomorrow was again very much in evidence with a good deal of switching from October to later deliveries. Trade interests were buyers of near months, and there seemed to be an increased demand for December as the price approached 18.60. This was sufficient to absorb rather heavy offerings late in the afternoon and impart a steady undertone to the market at the close.

Liverpool cables said the market there was higher on local, American and continental buying, influence by the corrected ginnings, and that a further business in cotton clothes was pending with India.

Exports today were 21,505, making 762,198 so far this season. Port receipts today, 76,341. United States port stocks, 1,089,124.

Score of Stocks Break From 5 to 20 Points After Staging Advance.

FEW SPOTS ARE STRONG

New York, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Aided by a series of unsettling news developments, bears launched an attack in the last hour of trading in today's stock market which completely swept the bull party off its feet and broke the market wide open.

Operations for the advance had been revived in a wide assortment of leading industrials and rails earlier in the session on the theory the intermittent decline of the past three weeks had reached bottom, but earlier gains were for the most part more than cancelled and scores of issues closed 5 to more than 20 points lower. Trading was only moderately active, however, 4,408,900 shares changing hands.

Although call money renewed at 8 per cent and held at that figure all day, as compared to yesterday's closing rate of 10, time money was quoted as high as 9¼ per cent, with a strong demand for funds at that figure to carry over the year end. This was regarded as a better barometer of the credit situation, and as auguring tight money for the rest of the year. Time money has not been quoted as high as 9¼ per cent since last May.

Higher London Rate Foreseen.

Also, reports that London had lost $14,000,000 in gold in the past two days made the increase in the Bank of England's discount rate seem more inevitable than ever, although it is understood the move will be postponed as long as possible to give the public psychological preparation for it. If the rate is not increased this Thursday, Wall street feels that it almost certainly will be next week.

Its probable effect upon the New York money market is variously predicted, but it is generally granted that it would tend to draw funds to this center, which, with the present tight money conditions, may have a marked effect.

Reports that steel production had fallen off to around 82 per cent of capacity, as compared to 86 per cent two weeks ago and 85 per cent a year ago, were also disturbing to market sentiment, although this was not unexpected, and the steel trade does not look for any fall upturn until October, in view of the extraordinarily active summer.

The statement of Arthur Legee, former head of the International Harvester Co., before the Senate committee on agriculture, that International stock, of which he is a large holder, is selling too high, was another unsettling influence.

North American Cut Melon.

Other items in the day's news were the cutting of a $30,000,000 melon by North American, and another assortment of August railway earnings reports, which were generally favorable, although Union Pacific showed a moderate decline. The announcement that President Hoover would recommend a substantial reduction in taxes at the regular session of Congress steadied the market for a short time around midday, but apparently was soon forgotten.

Another break in U. S. Steel, after yesterday's sharp rally, was particularly disappointing. After selling up nearly 5 points in the morning, to 241¾, it dropped to 231, off 6 points net, and closed at 231¾. Independent steels were generally heavy, Youngstown Sheet reaching a new 1929 low, at 131.

The motors were conspicuously weak, with uncertainty as to fall sales prospects an important factor. General Motors dropped about 3 points, to 70, which is less than 4 points from its low for the year, while Studebaker, Marmon, Nash, Graham Paige and Willys Overland agreed moderately to new 1929 minimum levels. Auburn dropped 15 points.

Some Fluctuate Widely.

High priced stocks fluctuated widely, Adams Express jumping 59 points, to 649 on rumors of an impending split-up, while Case Threshing dropped 39 points, to 385, Commercial Solvents and Detroit Edison about 20 points. Air stocks were heavy on rumors of overproduction. The old Curtiss stock, of which the floating supply is small, tumbled 29 points to 136, and Curtiss-Wright jagged to a new low below 20.

In the utilities, American and Foreign Power converted an early gain of about 5 points into a loss of 1 and American Telephone, after selling up about 6, closed 4 lower. Columbia Gas & Electric jumped about 6 points to a new peak, then lost most of its gain. Pacific Lighting tumbled 8 points to a new top, and lost half its gain. Consolidated Gas tumbled 8 points, and closed off 5.

Radio was again heavy, reaching a new low for the movement at 86, off about 4 points, and such shares as American Can, Atchison, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, and Westinghouse Electric lost from about 2 to 5 points.

Few Strong Points.

Among the few strong points was Simmons, which jumped 10 points to a new peak and closed 3 points higher. Eastman Kodak sold up 9 points on expectations of better market action on the maturity of the rights this week, but lost almost all of its gain. Beatrice Creamery, Murray Corp., Walworth and Meyers & Bro. reached new peaks and closed firm.

In the commodity markets, grains were again under pressure. Wheat lost nearly 2 cents a bushel on weakness at Winnipeg, and corn lost about a cent. An advance in cotton was mostly lost in profit taking before the close. Raw sugar was firmer with prices advancing 1-32 of a cent in the spot market.

Foreign exchanges were a little firmer, save for the Canadian dollar, which tumbled to a new low for the last couple of years below 99 cents. Sterling Cables moved a shade higher to $4.84 7-8.

BONDS MOVE LITTLE AS TRADING SHRINKS

FOREIGNS LAG ALL DAY

New York, Sept. 24 (A.P.). — Bond prices showed few important changes in dull trading today, although the trend of the market was on the side of easiness. Another advance in the time money rate, which was quoted at 9 to 9 1-4 per cent for all maturities against the recent charge of 9, was an unfavorable influence on sentiment toward credit conditions and dealings in fixed charge securities were small.

The increase in the money rate brought the highest figure in four months. Late in May time accommodation charges went to the extreme of 9 1-2 per cent, but soon thereafter a decline set in which carried the quotation down to 7 1-2, the prevailing rate about the middle of July. Since that time, however, the rate has been gradually increasing, and last week went to 9 per cent, after holding between 8 3-4 and 9 for a month. The bond market can hardly be expected to show improvement until time money eases.

Convertibles dipped sharply in the last hour today in sympathy with the slump in stocks. American Telephone 4 1-2s, which in the forenoon sold as high as 223 1-2, broke to 212 3-4, their closing price, or 3 1-4 below the previous final.

This was the only stock feature debenture showing any volume. American International 5 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s, International Telephone 4 1-2s, and Commercial Investment Trust 5 1-2s lost 1 to 2 1-2 points, while Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s sagged 8 3-4 on the transfer of a few bonds. Reading Coal & Iron 6s held in higher ground most of the day, but the late weakness erased their gain.

There was little of interest in the rail, utility and industrial groups. Baltimore & Ohio first 5s equaled their year's low at 101, while the road's gold 4s broke a point. New York Central 4s and 3 1-2s were also at about their low levels, but the low coupon Northern Pacific issues strengthened. Columbia Gas & Electric 5s yielded fractionally. Two amusement company bonds, the Lowe's, Inc., 6s with warrants and the Shubert Theater 6s improved 1 1-2 and 3 points, respectively. Pennsylvania Dixie Cement 6s were at their low of 72.

Foreign obligations lagged all day. Argentine government bonds firmed slightly, but Chilean issues and the Colombian Agricultural Bank securities sold off. German Central Bank for agricultural bonds also sagged.

Securities of the United States were stagnant. There was some activity in Liberty fourth 4 1-4s at lower levels. Turnovers elsewhere in the group were small and prices irregularly easier.

BANK CHAIN GROWTH BEING STUDIED HERE

Treasury Officials Say Expansion Unlikely to Cause New Legislation Now.

RIGGS STOCK RECEDES

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Local bankers are watching with interest the brisk increase in chain banking throughout the country, and there is considerable speculation regarding the probable policy of Congress in dealing with the situation. At the Treasury it has been announced that while the growth of chain banking was being observed with interest, no recommendations relative to this subject would be made to Congress.

The subject, it was said, must be approached carefully because of its broad scope. A close consideration of the entire banking structure is essential, the bankers being not yet of one mind with reference to a governing policy.

The situation results from a new tendency in banking; the wide control of banks by holding companies which form chains of them. One company in Minnesota has acquired control of approximately 100 banks in the Northwest. This particular action followed a series of failures of smaller banks and was taken with the belief that a chain system would afford greater stability and be generally beneficial to banking, business, industrial and agricultural interests in that section.

At present it is believed there is no legislative control of the chain banking practice except in its application to national banks, one national bank not being permitted to own another, although several national or reserve member banks might be controlled by a holding company.

Much debate and controversy is predicted when the question reaches Congress, however. It is anticipated its submission will signal the assembly for a formidable group opposed to the growth of centralized control of national finance.

New Telephone Facilities.

Additional telephone facilities for Washington, involving expenditures of $784,655, have just been authorized by the board of directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. The placing of these facilities will bring the total amount authorized for similar work in the District of Columbia so far this year to $2,419,885.

The facilities to be provided include the installation and modification of telephone equipment on the subscribers' premises for dial operation in the Metropolitan, District and National central office areas and the installation of fifteen toll switchboards equipped for 100 outward lines and 300 inward lines, together with associated equipment.

These switchboards will require the services of 30 additional operators. The installation of these switchboards is made necessary to take care of the increased number of toll calls now being made between Washington and various cities throughout the country.

Outside plant facilities authorized by the board of directors include underground conduit extensions in the Georgia central office district, and cable connections in the new bridges now being erected across the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Twenty-ninth and Thirty-first streets northwest, in the west central office area.

The board of directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. includes: Charles J. Bell, E. C. Graham, John Poole, B. F. Saul, Lloyd B. Wilson, Marshal D. Sedam, Philip O. Coffin, and D. S. Porter, Washington; and Walter S. Gifford and Eugene S. Wilson, New York.

Loading of Revenue Freight.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended on September 14 totaled 1,138,062 cars, the car service division of the American Railway Association announced yesterday.

This was an increase of 15,002 cars over the same week last year and an increase of 25,419 cars over the same week two years ago. It also was an increase of 135,990 cars over the preceding week this year, when loadings were reduced somewhat due to the observance of Labor Day.

Riggs Bank Stock Reacts.

Riggs National Bank stock, which created a recent sensation on the Washington Stock Exchange by mounting to six new highs in six consecutive sessions, representing a total climb of 41½ points, fell back nine points in a single sale yesterday, and closed with 610 bid and 630 asked.

Heavy sales of the smaller-priced issues sent the stock turnover to a record high for the month of 793 shares, a 276-share improvement over Monday's session. Bonds were neglected, however, total transactions of $5,500 marking a $9,900 recession from the preceding day.

Bank Makes Annual Award.

The Commercial National Bank made its annual award yesterday of prizes to employes who have successfully completed courses offered by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. Besides paying membership dues and tuition fees of employes in the chapter and its classes, the bank also rewards those who are successful students with cash prizes of $25 for elementary and $50 for standard courses.

Employes receiving awards were Claude B. Novarro, completing both standard and prestandard courses; Herman O. Corder, Eugene B. Glenn, A. C. Harris, George W. Hurst, L. B. Rouche and Homer G. Smith, standard courses, and Thelma L. Courtney, Robert W. Crandall, Harold F. Hair and G. F. Single, prestandard courses.

In addition to the prizes, a number of refunds were made for tuition for post-graduate courses and dues for attendance at the required number of classes. President R. Golden Donaldson of the bank distributed the prizes.

Chicago Tickers to Be Installed.

Following several conferences between certain local brokers and representatives of the Chicago Stock Exchange, this institution will install complete ticker service in several local brokers' offices. The move is in line with the rapidly expanding business of the Chicago board and for the convenience of many Midwestern people living in this city.

Myles H. Quail, of Y. E. Booker & Co., has returned to his office from an extended motor trip through New England.

Edward L. Hillyer, vice president, Union Trust Co., will return October 1 from a motor trip through Canada.

Eliot H. Thomson, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., has returned after a short vacation.

Ralph R. DePrez, manager Dupont Circle Branch, Riggs National Bank, has returned from a vacation.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1929. 19

LOUGHRAN CONTINUES TO HOLD SHARKEY LIGHTLY

Sam Hildreth, Turf Trainer, Dies at 68

Intestinal Trouble Is Fatal to Veteran Racing Figure.

Career Rivals Story Book; Prepared Zev for Triumphs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Samuel Clay Hildreth—"Uncle Sam" to the turf world—is dead, and with the passing of the 68-year-old trainer of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas Stable, thoroughbred facing lost its second famous conditioner of horses within a month.

Hildreth's death, which came today at the Fifth Avenue Hospital after a delicate abdominal operation yesterday, came close on that of James Rowe, sr., of Harry Payne Whitney's stable at Saratoga Springs last month. Hildredth and Rowe ranked as America's greatest trainers of race horses for years.

Funeral services for Hildreth will be held at St. Patrick's Cathedral Thursday morning. Burial will be at Saratoga Springs.

Sam Hildreth was a unique character on the turf. At 5 years of age he owned and trained a horse and never thereafter was he separated from the "sport of kings."

Hildreth Was Gambler; Broke 6 Times.

Unlike Rowe, Hildredth was a gambler. He often bet a small fortune on a horse, going broke no less than a half dozen times. Yet each time he accumulated another fortune until a few years ago he gave up wagering large sums and died a wealthy man. His salary and commissions from the Rancocas Stable often was placed as high as $100,000 a year.

Famed for his phenomenal success during the last decade, during which he won more than $1,000,000 from 1920 to 1923 for Harry F. Sinclair, Hildreth also was known for his success as a trainer of jockeys. It was under his tutelage that Earl Sande and Laverne Fator became known as America's ranking riders.

Brought Sinclair Into Racing Game.

Hildreth brought Sinclair into racing and finally into ownership of the Rancocas farm once owned by Pierre Lorillard. The farm now is one of the largest breeding plants in the world.

While Sam Hildreth was a great horseman and had unbounded confidence in his own ability, he called the late Jimmy Rowe, the greatest trainer that ever lived.

Managements of the major tracks operating announced that all flags would be at half-mast Thursday in tribute to the dead horseman. Trainer J. Lowe, in charge of the Rancocas horses racing at Havre de Grace, received instructions to scratch all Sinclair horses entered in any race until after the burial.

Huggins, Ill, Loses Ground After 3d Blood Transfusion

Infection Spreads as Manager of Yankees Fights for Life.

MILLER HUGGINS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Miller Huggins, mite manager of the New York Yankees, lost ground today in his battle to fight off an infection that threatened his life. Despite a third blood transfusion late this afternoon, his condition was even more critical, as the infection, growing out of an attack of influenza and erysipelas, spread from the left to the right side.

Dr. Edward H. King, team physician of the Yankees, issued no formal bulletin after the transfusion, but indicated that Huggins had not rallied as expected. His temperature remained about 104 and he was unconscious most of the day.

Condition Aggravated By Sticking With Club.

Huggins was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital last Friday when his condition first became serious following an illness of several weeks. His condition was aggravated by the pilot's refusal to quit his team until the race between the Yankees and Cleveland for second place had been decided.

Word of the gravity of Huggins' condition brought a flood of tokens of sympathy to the hospital and Yankee headquarters today. Members of the team, now playing in Boston, sent flowers and telegrams to the hospital and officials of the ball club kept in constant touch with Dr. King. Myrtle and Arthur Huggins, sister and brother of the manager were constantly at his bedside.

Doctor Puts Issue Up To Rallying Power.

In issuing a bulletin at 7 o'clock tonight, Dr. King said Huggin's fight "now is up to the patient himself and his rallying power." The bulletin gave the mite manager's temperature as 104.5, half a degree higher than at 4:30 o'clock, when the last previous recording was made. The spread of the infection to his right cheek was blamed for this increase.

Dr. King described his patient's condition as "neither better nor worse and still very serious.' Huggins rested comfortably thoroughout the afternoon and early evening.

MR. HUGGINS PERSISTENT PERSON

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Little Mr. Huggins, the manager of the Yankee Ball Club is so sick that the papers have set men to standing watches on the steps of St. Vincent's Hospital. That is always a bad sign, but it is not infallible. I stood watches in the lobby of the Vanderbilt Hotel for more than a week several years ago, when Enrico Caruso, the big singer, was so sick that the doctors had wagons backing up to the employes entrance fentching him tanks of oxygen, but he got well enough to make a trip to Europe after that. At any rate, while little Mr. Huggins has the strength to draw one breath he will use it fighting to draw the next one and so forth, because he is a very persistent, stubborn, game little man.

He seems very much like Mr. Coolidge in some ways, for he came to be one of the big men of the baseball industry more by quiet, patient, almost negative methods of doing than by uproarous executive manners. McGraw now has always been just the opposite, more like Roosevelt.

Hug Is Great Manager, Judged By Results.

Considering his elapsed time as manager of the Yankees, Mr Huggins has been one of the greatest baseball managers, judged strictly by results, that the industry has yet produced. He won six pennants for a firm that had never had a pennant in more than twenty years of trying before he took the job. He has been in office twelve sesons, so that gives him a manager's average of .500 in a game where the odds were theoretically 7 to 1 against him.

He did about as fine a job of keeping a still tongue in his head under extreme provocations as Mr. Coolidge did in the White House. That is, he would talk baseball freely enough, but when witty people flayed him yith sarcasm, Huggins invariably hauled off and ignored them.

His most difficult time ended when Capt. Til Huston, who used to own half of the baseball firm, sold out to his partner, Jake Ruppert, the brewer.

Sided With Babe Ruth Against Huggins.

The captain didn't like Huggins. More properly, he got into a row with Ban Johnson, then the president of the American League, and inasmuch as he is a big, thorough-going enemy, and Huggins was a Ban Johnson man, the captain's sentiments toward Ban went for Mr. Huggins, too.

The captain liked Babe Ruth and the Babe, who was then a very headstrong young man, played his influence with the captain against Huggins. Most baseball men in Huggins' position would have fallen to brooding about their authority and pride and would have called for a showdown. If Huggins had done that then, Ruth and the captain would have

Cobb, as Scribe, May See Spirit Marching On When Simmons Faces Cubs' Pitchers

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24 (A.P.)—Tyrus Raymond Cobb will be only a reporter at the world's series of 1929, but from his press box seat he may see his baseball spirit marching on.

A roundabout compliment was paid the Georgia Peach when Cub pitchers were given their riding orders in two words: "Stop Simmons."

Al Simmons, the No. 1 hitter of the Athletics and of the American League as well, is a right-handed Ty Cobb. There is no physical resemblance between the great batsman of yesterday and his current successor, and their batting styles are vastly dissimilar, but in many ways the Simmons of today reminds spectators of the Cobb of yesterday.

Cobb's Words of Wisdom Helped Protege.

When Cobb joined the Athletics to have his last fling at baseball, Simmons was a good hitter; when Cobb finally left the game that had become drudgery to him, he dropped a bat full of base hits and Simmons picked it up. The good batsman had become great.

Simmons and Cobb were "roomies" with the Athletics and the young man sat at the feet of a baseball Gamaliel as words of wisdom dropped to be eagerly gobbled up. Baseball is one game where imitation is worth while as well as sincere flattery.

Al now has virtually all the famous mannerisms of Ty. He swings the three bats as did the greatest of them all, has that tense alert position in the batters' box and, more important to the house of Mack, gets base hits as did his mentor, not quite so many, perhaps, but for even greater distance.

When Simmons came to the majors he was tagged as a player who "puts his foot in the water bucket," meaning that he stepped away from the plate. However, there was a catch in it. Simmons' batting style was unorthodox, but he stepped into the ball. If Simmons is a "water-bucket" hitter, Connie Mack would like to have several more of this peculiar type.

Al Not Annoyed By Fast-ball Hurling.

Some close observers have suggested that the Cubs' fast-ball pitchers will annoy the great Simmons no end. Al, himself, was asked for an opinion.

"Yeah?" he replied. "Well, maybe not. There are some fast-ball pitchers in our league, too. Sometimes you can hit the best of 'em and sometimes you can't hit any of 'em. C 3 thing I know, I'll be up there swinging."

Fans who have seen Al swing all season will be prepared to believe him. The Cub fans may yell "water bucket" at him all afternoon. Al says a base hit stops that.

His efforts probably will not be lessened any by the knowledge that his idol, T. R. Cobb, is looking on.

Public Warned by Cubs Of Counterfeit Tickets

Chicago, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Counterfeit tickets for world series games to be played at Wrigley Fields, home of the Cubs, were reported selling at scalpers' prices in Chicago today.

President William Veeck, of the Cubs, had his attention called to a pair of spurious ducats and immediately warned fans against purchasing any tickets except through regular channels.

"No official world series tickets will be sold until October 1l or 2," Veeck warned. "Any one possessing so-called tickets now should turn them over to us and inform us as to the seller. The official tickets now are being printed."

Veeck said drastic action would be taken against any persons selling fake pasteboards.

Training Ends For Battle Tomorrow

Loughran Seeks to Increase Punch by Added Weight.

Sharkey, Bigger, Is Slight Favorite to Win Fight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Now that Phil Scott, Britain's fighting fireman, has for the time being disposed of Victorio Campolo, the large Argentinian, the flatic field is cleared for the belligerent gestures of a pair of homebreds, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey, in the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Under the patronage of Madison Square Garden, the former light-heavyweight champion and Boston's talkative tar, meet in a fifteen-round match, the winner of which is certain of an interesting vacation next winter in Miami and a feature role in the second annual heavyweight spectacle on the Florida sands.

Loughran Hangs Up Training Gloves.

At Harveys Lake, Pa., Loughran has already hung up his training gloves after boosting his poundage to 169, the highest of his long career. Tommy has sought to retain all his speed and boxing prowess while developing punching power that somehow never seemed to sprout during this 175-pound career. He is full of confidence, publicly contemptuous of Sharkey's ability.

Due to the chilly weather, Sharkey gave up the task of reducing to 186 pounds and expects to enter the ring several notches above that figure. Battling the ring rust that gathers during long lay-offs, the Boston Gob has shown alternately fine and poor form during training at Orangeburg, N. Y. Sharkey seems to have grown larger about the arms and shoulders since his match with Young Stribling last winter, possibly at the expense of some speed afoot.

Sharkey Once More Is Loquacious.

Sharkey once more is the loquacious, domineering figure of the days when he challenged Jack Dempsey unsuccessfully for the right to meet Tunney for the title in 1927. Despite his recent inactivity, he is a slight favorite to whip Loughran and add once more for the championship. To make matters even, Sharkey has a fine contempt for the former 175-pound king, both as a boxer and a puncher.

The match, final heavyweight fling of the outdoor season, is expected to draw a gate approaching $200,000, with the crowd totaling about 20,000.

St. Louis, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The Cardinals triumphed over the Cincinnati Reds again today, 3 to 1. Hafey's twenty-seventh homer of the season in the fourth started the Cards scoring, all of which they did in the same inning.

ON HER TOES NEVER HEADED IN FEATURE AT GRAW

Riddle's Filly Wins Sprint In Gallop

Itso Upsets Forecast With Triumph in Juvenile Race.

Ellice Hangs on to Beat Enid by Head in Third Event.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 24.—On Her Toes, the handsome brown filly that races for the Glen Riddle Farms, showed brilliant speed in the running of the Eclipse Purse this afternoon when she ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5. She was one of the field of seven that went to the post and was a well-played favorite. There were fast ones in with the Glen Riddle filly, but when it came to the running, On Her Toes simply smothered her opposition for speed.

Breaking last, but one of her field, On Her Toes moved up with a rush next the inside rail and before they reached the half-mile pole, she was out in front leading the Audley Farm's Erin Queen by a length and a half. She reeled off the first quarter in 0:22 2-5. Rounding the far turn she increased her advantage to three lengths. She had those back of her staggering. At the stretch turn she was still three lengths in front. The clockers stopped their watches on the half mile in 0:46 flat. Leishman was sitting still and never made a move.

On Her Toes Scores Easy Victory.

In the run through the home stretch On Her Toes kept up her fast pace and at the end scored in easy fashion. Erin Queen was second, beaten off three lengths and a half, and then followed Harry Payne Whitney's fantivy another length away. The time for the 6 furlongs was the fastest scored at the meeting and On Her Toes is evidently at the top of her form. Erin Queen, which finished second, paid the handsome dividend of $90, a place in the $2 mutuels.

Battleship Gray came back after On Her Toes' victory in the Eclipse to score in runaway fashion in the Belvedere Purse. Robertson had the mount and at no time during the running did Battleship Gray appear to be fully extended. A horse of faultless action, he appeared to be skimming over the ground and in the run down the back stretch, opened up a lead of a couple of lengths.

Lativich made several desperate attempts to get the flying leader, but whenever he made a bid, Robertson simply permitted Battleship Gray to step along a little faster. At the finish the Glen Riddle colt had a two-length margin over Lativich, and the latter beat Searcher four lengths for the place.

Ordinary 2-Year-Olds In Opener.

The first race brought out a field of ordinary 2-year-olds. It was a dash of five and a half furlongs, under claiming conditions. Leller Bunny, on form, looked best and was the public choice. George Fields was given the mount, and his people made no secret of the fact that they thought the son of Royal Canopy would be returned the winner.

The colt raced well and was out in front showing the way in the run down the back stretch. Wig and Lady Tryster were with him and the trio raced in close company until rounding the far turn, where Western Light joined issue. In the meantime Steffen was rating Itso in behind the leaders while Benda was back in the middle of the bunch. Straightened out for the final run, Itso moved up strong and, passing the tiring pacemakers, won, going away at the end by a length and a half.

Bendo, after appearing hopelessly out of it, was taken to the outside, entering the home stretch, and in the final furlong she came from behind to finish with a rush. She was up in time to beat Wig a nose for the place. Leller Bunny was fourth, another head away. Hindrance delayed the start by his fractious antics, in which he unseated the rider several times before a start was finally obtained.

Battle Ax Extended To Triumph.

The conditions of the second race brought out a field of maiden 3-year-olds. It was a dash of one mile and 70 yards, and on form, Battle Axe looked in a soft spot. The Garth horse won, but his victory was not the easy thing his people looked for. Steffen, who has been riding in great form here, had the mount, and in a rousing finish he landed Battle Axe home a head in front of Faux Pas.

When the start came Battle Axe broke well, and rounding the first turn he outfooted his field to take the lead entering the back stretch. He then drew away and was two lengths in front at the half-mile post. Making the turn for home he went wide and carried Faux Pas out with him. When Steffen straightened him out he came again and at the furlong pole it looked as if he would be an easy winner.

In the last sixteenth Battle Axe tired badly and just managed to last long enough. Faux Pas beat Rockdor five lengths for the place. The latter quit under punishment after making a determined effort entering the home stretch.

ITSO, off forwardly, gradually improved his position, closed stoutly in stretch run to pass the tiring pacemakers last sixteenth. BENDA broke very slowly, worked her way on outside and finished going strongest of her field. WIG and LELLER BUNNY raced like a team most of the trip.

SECOND RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,300. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:53. Winner, W. Garth's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLE AXE, $4.00, $3.00, $2.80; FAUX PAS, $6.10, $4.70; ROCKDOR, $4.90.

BATTLE AXE broke fast and outran his opposition from the start, drew away on back stretch, made a wide turn entering home stretch, but hung on with good courage under punishment. FAUX PAS was carried very wide when winner broke out at stretch turn, came again when he got straightened out. He was probably best. ROCKDOR broke slow, moved up stoutly rounding turn for home, where he gained a lot of ground, but tired when the real test came.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. The Severn. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:23. Winner, D. E. Sieber's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELLICE, $12.40, $5.40, $2.80; ENID, $2.90, $2.20; PRUMPER, $2.30.

ELLICE went to the front with a rush in run down the back stretch and drew away into an easy lead, stalled off challenge from SCARED O' NOTHIN', but was tiring at the end and just lasted long enough. ENID, in hand in early stages, was taken to outside rounding the far turn, closed full of courage and was gradually wearing the winner down. PRUMPER began very slowly. He closed a lot of ground.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300. The Eclipse. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:53. Winner. Glen Riddle Farms' br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLESHIP GREY, $3.30, $3.50, $2.10; LATIVICH, $3.70, $2.20; SEARCH, $2.60.

BATTLESHIP GREY was taken next to outside post position and broke outside of stalls, went to the front with a rush in run to first turn and was rated in front remainder of the trip. LATIVICH shook off SEARCHER in stretch run. He was easily best of others. Latter, very fractious at post, broke from next the outside fence. He was in hand first half mile, but tired last quarter.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:59. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR BILL, $28.60, $12.80, $8.00; VANDAL, $9.40, $5.80; HARVARD, $11.50.

FAIR BILL was in close pursuit of pace from the start. Cannon had him in hand until entering home stretch, where he moved up and went to the front with a push. He had something in hand at the end. VANDAL used up making the pace, tired when the winner challenged. HARVARD tired badly and just lasted long enough to stall off JANE RINEHART. BLADE broke very slow, closed ground rounding the far turn, but had no room to catch run.

SEA RIP, quick to find his stride, outran his field from the break and drew away rounding turn into back stretch, came again after being headed by PELLEGRINO and REJUVENATION at furlong pole and outgamed latter at end.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

By ROBERT J. COLLYER

GREELY DAY! The good Irish lad—Johnny Greely—seems to have set himself for today, in spots where, unless he has all the bad luck in the world, he should cop the kale. I refer specifically to BRUNO and TRAYMORE. The latter, a trick possessing a bit of class, is dropped into the closing dash, along with a band of hash hounds where he should fall down, get up, turn three somersaults, then be first to look the judge in the eyes. Has all the foot of his party and with a better boy up today, it should be Katy, bar the door.

In the event it turns muddy, then "Dutch" Reuter will about cop with his sleeper—HAPPY BOB. The latter is a finer than split silk.

As for BRUNO, he should be on the Bill Daley—all the way. BARITONE is the dangerous one with MISS PEARL in close attendance.

THE PADRE—in the day's opener—has a clear call of points over his field. However, there were overnight whisperings anent the "cutting loose of BOY GIBSON," which, by the way, has been given a chicken prep. Tab the ring action closely.

TEN MILE, in the second, was an overnight commission horse and seems to have better than the usual "shade."

Over at Toronto, Br'er Fraser has outdone himself, presenting a card of olio length and variety with the headliner—the Stanley Produce Stakes—which carriers $10,000 in added money. All things considered, this looks like a "jobbie" for THE NUT, which, in company with FRISIUS and COMSTOCKERY, was shipped on from New York. In this order I expect them to finish.

The consistent MR. GAIETY is taking up his package, giving 10 pounds to the Seagram representative —BEAU OF THE WEST. The latter is no slouch, but I am sticking to GAIETY.

EIDER, in the cross-country race, sticks out like a sore thumb. This is an exceptionally safe wager. More anon.

Equinox First Home In Race From Danville

Due to cloudy weather and northeast winds, not one pigeon was able to fly here from Danville, Va., on the day of liberation. Equinox, a young hen, was the first home on the second morning after being released. Flying Fool, bred by John H. Holmead, finished second, while Henry C. Hile's Hard Hit finished third. Harold E. Thomas won the special average return diploma, having three birds home out of an entry of eight.

Result of the race, showing in yards per minute of the first return to each loft on the second morning:

EASTERN OPENS SCHOLASTIC GRID SEASON FRIDAY

Calvert Hall Tests D. C. Favorites

Coach Kelley Pleased With Showing of His Back Field.

Series Games to Start at 3:45; Brownfield Ineligible.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER, JR.

The Eastern High School belongs the honor of officially opening the 1929 scholastic football campaign, for on Friday afternoon at 3:30, the Lincoln Parkers will line up against Calvert Hall, of Baltimore, at the Eastern Stadium, in what will be the first gridiron game of the season for local schools. Although two other schools were slated to play games at the end of this week, the opponents of both have canceled these engagements, leaving Eastern as the sole schoolboy eleven to see action in the immediate future.

In preparation for its baptism under fire, Coach "Mike" Kelly sent his lads, Light Blue and White squad through a long workout yesterday terminating in a scrimmage between his regular eleven and second-stringers. The two teams battled for several periods of regulation length during which time Kelly had the pleasure of seeing his regulars tear through the opposing line for substantial gains.

Millar, Oxley, McCullough And Burns Backs.

With Millar, Oxley, McCullough, and Burns forming his first-string back field, the veteran mentor witnessed four men in action who promise to show Eastern fans a real offensive threat in the opening game. Each one of the quartet showed marked ability in advancing the ball and should they perform Friday as they did yesterday, Calvert Hall should be in for some rough sledding.

Not only will the game mark the beginning of the local gridiron season, but it will at the same time give the followers of the Lincoln Park school an opportunity to size up for themselves the chances of this team for the high school title. Generally picked as the favorite, the team will be carefully watched.

Lights May Be Needed For Late Games.

In view of the later closing hours of the high schools this year, it has been decided to start all interhigh contests at 3:45 instead of 3:15, as was the case last season. Although this will no doubt give those who have the farthest to travel ample time in which to reach Central Stadium, there is a serious doubt in the minds of many as to the feasibility of the new plan. If remembered correctly, many of the games last year were finished in semidarkness, even when started at the former hour, and with the opening kick-off now slated for a half-hour later, it seems as if the fans will be in for some nocturnal games. If the present scheme is carried out, it might not be amiss to equip the Mount Pleasant stadium with arc lights, which may be turned on toward the close of the game.

Brownfield Ineligible For First Period.

Ed Brownfield, star Western High School back, who only Monday returned to that school from Emerson, has been declared ineligible for present competition, and will be unable to play for the team from across the creek throughout the first advisory period, which lasts for six weeks. If Brownfield makes up his deficiency, he will be able to rejoin his teammates on November 4, which will permit him to play in Western's last two games with Central and Tech.

Barons and Steers Open Dixie Series Today

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The arrival tonight of the Dallas Steers, accompanied by a delegation of 1,000, found the Birmingham Barons, Southern League champions, in readiness for their second try at a Dixie series championship within two years.

The Steers were pronounced in top form when the Texas contingent detrained at the terminal station shortly after 11 o'clock. Manager Milton Stock hustled his charges off to bed after a good night's sleep before the initial engagement tomorrow, the result of which it is predicted will have a heavy bearing on the way the series will go.

Johnny Dobbs, the Barbnial sage, will depend upon the experience and master mind of Old Ray Caldwell, who has been under every kind of fire known to a moundsman in his 20 years of pitching, in the initial game.

Loveye Adkins Wins Railroad Net Honors

Loveye Adkins, recent runner-up in the District Junior Girls' tennis singles championship tournament, on Saturday won the championship of the girls' tennis tournament of the Baltimore Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad System held at Altoona, Pa. In the semifinals the Washington girl defeated the Chicago lassie who had held the championship for the past two years. In the final match she defeated Miss M. L. Fitzgerald in two hard-fought sets, 7—5, 9—7.

HUGGINS PERSISTENT PERSON, SAYS PEGLER

won the showdown because Ruth was slamming home runs all over the league, the turnstiles were being mobbed by his personal following and even though Huggins was a winning manager, everybody realized that Jake and Til, the owners, had bought him a champion team.

Was Openly Insulted By His Ball Team.

Huggins, being so quiet and little and sickly and the ball players being so big and noisy, he gave a public impression of being the least important man on the staff. I seem to recall that one of the umpires, clearing the Yankee bench during a row one day, waved his arm at them and yelled, "Get out of there, all of you, and," pointing to Huggins, "take the bat-boy with you."

The Babe was very unruly for several seasons, and there were others on the team who, taking their cue from him, openly sassed Mr. Huggins and drank beer at night. Once, during a Western trip, several of the lads staggered back to the hotel at 2 o'clock in the morning and, gathering in the courtyard below Mr. Huggins' room, serenaded him with an impromptu chorus, "Oh, Miller, your ball club is stewed again!"

After Cap Huston sold out to Jake, Miller's life was less unpleasant, but still he didn't assert his authority for a long time. He waited and gradually the Babe's night-prowling companions quieted down or bogged down and were traded out of the league. For replacements, Mr. Huggins got well-behaved boys such as Earl Combs, Lou Gehrig and Tony Lazzeri.

Huggins Turns on Babe With $5,000 Fine.

Still Ruth, crowding his luck, imposing on his reputation, and not realizing that he had lost his drag when Huston sold out, continued to misbehave until there came that shocking episode in St. Louis when the Miller, at last, let him have it. He canned the Babe off the ball team, fined him $5,000 and sent him back to New York. The Babe said he was going to tell Jake just what was wrong with Huggins as a manager, but Jake made him apologize to Huggins before he would reinstate him. That stopped Ruth, and Mr. Huggins became the manager of the Yankee ball club beyond challange or doubt.

Now, of course, that original champion Yankee team needed very little management. The owners had bought the champion Boston Club almost intact from Harry Frazee and moved it down to New York, all of which was a very raw piece of business, but a fine commercial stroke.

Displays Managerial Ability Lately.

But later on, when the members of Ruth's original supporting case began to lose their jobs, the Miller showed what sort of a baseball man he was in rebuilding the team around Ruth and the pitchers. He made smart trades and bought shrewdly and won three more pennants and in these works he was as much responsible as any manager ever had been for a ball club's success.

He has always been an ailing man, now with digestive troubles, and yet he drove himself constantly, with his nerves raw and jangling and he never seemed to enjoy success. Even when he was on top of the world in his business, he wore a pained, unhappy expression. He fought hard to win and seemed to think he had done nothing much when he did win.

BIGGER NAVY SCHEDULE FOR 1930

Princeton, Penn and Southern Methodist May Be Added.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 24.—Navy's 1930 football schedule is a matter of much speculation, notwithstanding that the 1929 campaign has yet to sw[illegible] in. The Middies seem due to have a great team this year. The Notre Dame game in Baltimore will be regarded as an index. The crack team promised this year should be greater a year hence and with this in mind Commander Jonas H. Ingram, who, with the new year, will complete his tour of duty here, is reported as preparing a schedule that will give Navy a dignified position in the football world.

It is known positively that Navy intends to play Princeton whenever possible, and likewise the University of Pennsylvania. In and around Philadelphia every one turns out for Navy games. Then, too, Ohio State and Southern Methodist College will both begin home-and-home contests with the Middies next fall. Notre Dame is another certainty on the 1930 card, while there is a possibility of Michigan again being lined up.

Other teams such as Duke, William and Mary, West Virginia Wesleyan and Dennison may be named for fill-in games. At any rate only the closing game remains the big problem. Navy, it seems, is still hopeful of resuming with Army, and restoring what all followers of the service desire. A surprise announcement concerning these abandoned games may be made at any time.

Freshman Rule Causes Loss of Stars.

Since the rift Army has adopted the freshman rule while Navy has lost a number of stars through adherence to its three-year code. A special agreement between the two academies does not seem improbable, for instance, the ironclad establishment of a four-year rule. Nothing official is to be heard about the question, however. For a time it appeared certain that the Tars and Southern California would get together in 1930. The Far Western institution even sent a representative to the academy, but Navy, still holding hope for a service game, was slow in signing and now California has tied up to journey this way to oppose another Eastern team, it is reported. However, in event Army still balks, Navy will unquestionably find some Far Western eleven. They have already secured big teams from all other sections.

1930 Georgetown Game Is Doubtful.

Whether Georgetown will be played in 1930 Ingram will not say. The tussle always stirs up plenty of fuss, but it is known that Ingram is anxious to have Navy get together with the University of Maryland and there is a flicker of a chance that Western Maryland may eventually get a game, Ingram holding Dick Harlow in high esteem.

There is even a big touch of Maryland coaching to the Navy Team. Johnny Wilson, one of the greatest backs St. John's ever had, and credited in the rule book as the first back to really ever perfect the forward pass, is truly a great coach and a real man. Navy foes rate him one of the greatest scouts of all time.

Flying Gal Is Winner In Aqueduct Handicap

Aqueduct Race Track, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The Belair Stud's Flying Gal, literally backed off the boards, scored in a romp in the Babylon Handicap, six furlongs, for 2-year-olds, here today. Flying Gal was backed from a high quotation of 4 to 1 down to 9 to 5 and they were taking the short price as the field got away. Flying Gal broke a bit slowly, but McAuliffe, who had the mount, rushed the filly up on the outside and into the lead. He had the filly under wraps and was looking back at the field all through the stretch and at the end Flying Gal was in front by two lengths. Starpatic beat Stanton, an added starter, half a length for the place. The race was worth $5,275 to the winner and the time was 1:13.

Navy Firsts Scrimmage With Scrub Combination

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 24.—Full steam ahead was the order of football practice for the Navy gridders this afternoon, after their rather light program yesterday. Head Coach Ingram drove his tentative Varsity lineup through a stiff scrimmage against strong scrub combination and plays were run off with great precision.

Two sets of backs alternated during the workout, and frequent changes also were made in the forward wall.

The squad has been fortunate so far in not suffering handicaps by serious injuries and should be in fine shape for the opening battle with Dennison Saturday. The Tars should take this game with comparative ease.

Barons Hosts Today As Dixie Series Opens

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The Dixie series for the second year participated in by the Birmingham Barons, Southern League champions, which opens here tomorrow, will present two teams strategically well fortified. Johnny Dobbs, five times a winner in the Southern League, and Milton Stock, himself a former Southern Leaguer, will hook up in a battle of wits which fans here are looking to with more than passing interest.

Upon the shoulders of ancient Ray Caldwell, who has been pitching baseball more than 20 of his 42 years, probably will rest the burden of firing the initial gun in Birmingham's effort to do what Southern League champions have sought vainly to do since Mobile defeated Fort Worth to win the Dixie Series in 1922.

Stock will lead his Dallas Steers into town tonight. In addition to himself, he will bring along six former Southern leaguers, all of whom will feel more or less at home in the Baron ballwick. Country Davis and Joe Martina, formerly with New Orleans; Whitey Glazner, who played with Birmingham and Mobile; Hap Morse, Nashville contribution to the Texas League champions, and Jimmie Moore and George Bischoff, formerly with Memphis, will be the familiar faces in action during the series here.

It will take a battery of smart pitchers to subdue the Barons, Dobbs said, in effect. This coupled with the fact that the Barons' pitching staff is no slouch itself, leads the Baronial skipper to believe that the champions are on the threshhhold of the second Dixie series championship to be won within the confines of the Southern League.

The initial game will be played tomorrow with the second battle scheduled for Thursday. The combatants will then entrain for Dallas for three games, returning here if additional contests are necessary.

Yanks Beat Red Sox; Zachary Wins Twelfth

Boston, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The Yankees won the opening game of their final series against Boston this season by 5 to 3 here today. The veteran southpaw, Tom Zachary, won his twelfth of a season in which he yet has to suffer a defeat.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 24.—Eight local golfers have survived the first-round play in the annual Belle Haven Golf and Country Club bowl classic, now in progress. E. V. Weems, winner of last year's play, has entered the tournament in an effort to gain another leg on the bowl, the rules specifying that the trophy must be won three times by an individual before passing into his permanent possession.

There were sixteen golfers to qualify for the first-round matches, the results being as follows: E. V. Weems won from C. F. Holden, 1 up; Charles C. Carlin, jr., defeated Dr. Samuel B. Moore, 2 to 1; H. Emhardt defeated J. Randall Caton, jr., 4 to 3; Beaudric L. Howell defeated R. L. Kane, 4 to 3; T. E. Sebrell, jr., defeated Paul Delaney, 8 to 7; Dr. Gantz defeated T. B. Clem, 2 up; Dr. D. F. McGowan defeated G. L. Boothe 2d, 3 to 2, and Col. Pipes won his match from C. C. Brown, 5 to 4.

In the only second-round match played so far, B. L. Howell, one of the leaders of the club, defeated H. Emhardt, 6 to 5. The pairings for the second-round play are C. C. Carlin, jr., vs. E. V. Weems; T. E. Sebrell vs. Dr. Gantz, and Dr. D. F. McGowan vs. Col. Pipes. The semi-finals will be staged on Thursday, and the finals over 36 holes will be played Saturday and Sunday.

The women's club championship qualification round is now in progress, several of the players having already turned in scores.

The Alexandria City Bowling League opened last night, with only one of the two scheduled matches being played, but this one furnished plenty of thrills for the spectators. Joe Theimer's Potomacs scored a total of 1,688 pins for three games, defeating Fruit Growers Express No. 2 Team. The scores of the individual games were 562, 593 and 533.

The Snorters, scheduled for the second game, were forced to forfeit to Fruit Growers No. 1, Capt. Gorman, of the Snorters, stating that his teammates had not been properly notified and failed to show up.

The Boat Club will roll the Celtics and the Carter Motor Co. will oppose the Auto Accessories in tonight's games.

Thirty players have reported for the Virginia Athletic Club Football Team, and Coach Buck Beach is enthused over the outlook for a good season. His charges will open their season next Sunday afternoon at the Shipyard Field at 3 o'clock. Several players who were with the A. F. D. Preps last year have joined the ranks of the Virginias.

Coach Beach and Back Field Capt. Lyons have requested all candidates to report for practice each night this week at King and Lee streets.

SEEK GRID FOES.

The Palace A. C. 135-pound football team would like to book a game for Sunday at 1 o'clock. The Palacians will drill tonight at 7:30 o'clock in West Potomac Park. J. Smith, Metropolitan 4928, is booking games between 6 and 7 o'cloc.

DAVIS-ELKINS SEEKS FIELD LEADER

Coaches Doubtful as to Quarter to Oppose West Va.

Special to The Washington Post.

ELKINS, Sept. 24.—Who will act as field general of the Davis and Elkins College Football Team when it starts the game next Saturday against West Virginia University at Mountaineer Field in Morgantown?

This is one question that many fans are asking, particularly those Senator backers who are hoping that Coach Cam Henderson can replace Ran McKinney, who is lost to the team but who guided the play of the "Scarlet Hurricane" last season in its defeat of the Mountaineers in that fine struggle which thrilled fans, and which will bring out the record grid crowd this season at Morgantown.

Not many days ago at Jackson's Mill, it is said on good authority, Coach Rodgers remarked to Max Hannum, of the Pittsburgh Press, that McKinney was one of the best football players he had ever seen and that the Davis and Elkins lad could surely run a team with real ability.

Rengle Likely to Call Plays For Senators.

It is known here that Coach Henderson was highly pleased with McKinney's performance, and all the more so because he took the green mountain lad and taught him all the football lore he ever knew. McKinney never played football at Burnsville High School and he came here with no knowledge of the game.

It seems to be the best opinion hereabouts that Neil Rengle, plunging full back, will run the team on the field in the West Virginia contests. Rengle is recognized as a real threat, either in ball toting or passing—but whether he will be used to pilot the team's plays remains to be seen.

Coach Henderson also has been using Smith, the speedy half back, who will likely start against the Mountaineers. It is known that he ran the eleven part of the game here against Morris Harvey College—and did a nice job, too.

La Ruse to Be Field Leader For West Virginia.

Early season games always depend a great deal on the generalship of a team's plays. This game Saturday will find LaHuse running the Mountaineer Team—and he is a tried and trusted man at the job. Who will handle that most difficult job for the Senators remains to be seen.

Tarheels Trim Frosh On Mud-Soaked Grid

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 24—Tarheel football candidates kept up the training grind today despite a mud-soaked field and two Tarheel elevens drubbed the Carolina freshmen in a long scrimmage.

Branch and Erickson, the Tarheel champion sidesteppers, squirmed away to several nice runs despite the slipperiness of the field; while George Thompson, tackle, and Jenks Hutchinson, guard, were looking best of the rookie line candidates.

The veterans will probably scrimmage tomorrow with light workouts to round out the training program for the Wake Forest game here Saturday.

District Amateur Play Starts Today.

The District amateur golf championship tournament begins today on the course of the Congressional Country Club, 72 holes, medal play. In addition to the entries printed in The Post yesterday, Frank K. Roesch and R. T. Harrell, of the Washington club, will start at 8:50 o'clock this morning and will be followed five minutes later by Lindsay Stott and John R. Miller, both of the Beaver Dam Club.

Nearly 100 employes of the Interstate Commerce Commission competed in a golf tournament on the course of the Indian Spring Club yesterday, and while there were a large number of prizes for varying scores, the principal interest centered in the contest for the handsome trophy donated by the attorneys who practice before the commission.

Quintruple Tie for Eighth Place.

The plan of the tournament called for the eight low net scores in a medal-play 36-hole round to qualify for match play. When all the cards had been examined seven had qualified but there was a quintuple tie for eighth place, as follows:

Qualified—C. A. Rice, 181—38—143; N. C. Trowbridge, 171—24—147; John T. Money, 168—20—148; R. R. Shea, 168—20—148; C. R. Baker, 182—34—148; M. L. Brownell, 174—24—150; W. A. Roberts, 206—56—150.

Tie—A. A. Biddle, 193—42—151; A. R. Strohm, 167—16—151; B. L. Smelker, 173—22—151; R. K. White, 175—24—151; C. Sevenius, 189—38—151.

The contestants who tied for the eighth place will play off the tie this afternoon on the Indian Spring course and the low net will qualify. There will be two rounds of match play tomorrow, with a 36-hole final on Friday, the winner to be awarded the trophy.

Six Teams Entered. 125 Pounders to Meet Saturday.

WITH the final organization last night of the senior section, two divisions of the Capital City Football League are ready and waiting for the opening of the respective schedules on October 13. The senior section corresponds with the 150-pound section of last year. There will be no weight limit in that section this fall.

The 135-pound group has completed all plans and eight are ready to start the campaign. Six teams comprise the senior division.

The 135-pound group includes the Mardfeldts, Palace A. C., Brentwood, Janney, Colonials, Columbians, Notre Dame Preps and Northern Preps.

Six Elevens Entered In Senior Class.

In the senior division are Brookland A. C., Friendship A. C., Mercurys, Marions, St. Stephen's A. C. and Mohawk Preps.

A final meeting of the 125-pound class teams will be held Saturday night at French's, 721 Fourteenth street, at 7:30 o'clock. No teams will be admitted after this session. Managers will be required to post a deposit on their franchise fees.

Missing Promoter Reported in Texas

New Orleans, La., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Southern Pacific Railroad officials today told the Louisiana State Boxing Commission that Frankie Edwards, the missing fight promoter, had boarded the 11:10 train Friday night out of New Orleans with a ticket for Houston but that he had left the train at Liberty, Tex., about 30 miles from Houston.

A.A.U. Group to Bring City To Front as Sports Center

Championship Events Probably Will Be Awarded District; Organization of Local Chapter to Be Completed October 15.

AS evidenced by the great display of enthusiasm at Tuesday night's preliminary organization meeting, the bright future of the District of Columbia Association of the Amateur Athletic Union already is insured. This was the widespread feeling of local sports leaders yesterday when speculation began to arise as to the probable official structure of the association.

Men prominently identified with big sports contests here in the past expressed confidence that the advent of the A. A. U. into the Capital will, through its orderly control and development of athletics, eventually bring this city into front rank as an athletic center. The coming of the District of Columbia Association will stimulate activity in athletics as never before experienced here, these men predicted.

National championship events, few of which ever have been staged for the benefit of Washington fans and athletes, will be brought here as a result of the promotion of the city in national athletic standing. It was foreseen by some that within the next twelve months, the Capital will be awarded two or three national A. A. U. championships.

Expansion of District Activity Sought.

Efforts will be made officially along this line when the District association sends its delegates to the national convention of the A. A. U. in St. Louis two months hence. Influential A. A. U. leaders are said to have been anxious to expand and develop the Washington amateur athletic activity.

Before the week is out the nominating committee, named Tuesday night to pick a slate of officers for the new association, will meet and commence executing its important duties. The president, three vice presidents, secretary, treasurer, five registration committeemen, handicappers of the swimming and track committees and delegates to the national convention are the officials to be nominated.

So far as could be learned yesterday, there is no one candidate for high office who is outstanding in the favor of the committee, nor of the 25 member clubs and colleges who will vote in the formal election on the night of October 15, when Daniel J. Ferris, national secretary-treasurer of the union, will return here to supervise the final step in the launching of the association.

Ferris to Receive Nominations.

The committee's nominations must be compiled by Saturday, October 5, and immediately forwarded to Secretary Ferris at national headquarters in New York City. If nominations independent of the committee are made they must be indorsed by five clubs and filed with Ferris at least six days before the October meeting.

Under a ruling given by Ferris Tuesday night, any clubs or colleges who were members of the South Atlantic Association previously, may transfer their membership to the District of Columbia Association upon the payment of the difference between the S. A. membership fee and the District fee. All member organizations must have paid their fees before the night of October 15 in order to take part in the election of officers.

MARSHALL HIGHWAY UNIT HOLDS PARLEY

Arlington County Members Reelect H. E. Naylor to Presidency.

MACMAHON IS NOTIFIED

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The John Marshall Highway Association held its annual meeting yesterday in the rooms of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at Clarendon, with the president, Hugh E. Naylor, in the chair.

In opening the meeting the president said: "While we are here to consider a great undertaking, the building of a national highway, we are also here to do honor to the memory of John Marshall, Virginia's distinguished jurist, and in doing him honor we honor ourselves."

Arthur Orr reported that he had been in contact with many attorneys and jurists of national reputation on the project. The association adopted a resolution offered by him that the president appoint a special committee, to be headed by a jurist of national reputation, with a view of placing the John Marshall highway on a national basis. The president announced he would make the appointment later.

Church Makes Appeal.

Addressing the meeting, M. E. Church, of Fairfax, appealed to the association for its united support in getting action from the State with regard to an approach to the new Memorial Bridge.

"The bridge is rapidly nearing completion, and if we started work today we would hardly see the road completed by the time the bridge is open to traffic," Mr. Church said.

"We are helpless here in Arlington County to do it alone. We need the full support and cooperation of this organization with the State Highway Department to get action.

Shirley Letter Read.

"It would be most unfortunate to see this bridge thrown open to the traveling public without an adequate approach through Arlington County," declared Church.

A letter from Col. H. G. Shirley, chairman of the State Highway Commission, to the officials of the organization was read. The letter follows:

"The State Highway Commission has not determined the permanent location of the Straight-to-the-Bridge boulevard nor ill they do so until they have funds available for construction. We have run one survey through which the line may be adopted but the final location will not be finally determined until funds are allocated for its improvement. Until that time we will be unable to advise you what the straight-to-the-bridge route will be."

Officers Are Elected.

It was pointed out that the association has approved the straight-to-the-bridge-boulevard as the first link of the John Marshall Highway.

The business meeting concluded with the election of the following officers:

Directorate Is Chosen.

Members of the board of directors are as follows: From Arlington County, Arthur Orr, Ashton C. Jones, M. E. Church and Dr. Frank T. Stone; from Fauquier County, George T. Strother, William Beverley, John Ramey, A. C. Reed, A. V. Baird and Thomas B. Glasscock; from Fairfax County, George W. Robey, John Rust, F. W. Huddleson and George F. Harrison; from Shenandoah County, Frank L. Tavener, jr., H. B. Chapman and R. S. Wright; from Prince William County, Thomas Lion, Rolfe Robinson and Wade C. Payne, and from Warren County, E. H. Jackson, C. L. Melton, Hugh E. Naylor, W. W. Wonner and S. R. Milton.

After the election luncheon was served in the Clarendon Methodist Church by the ladies of the church after which the meeting was addressed in the church auditorium by Representative John M. Robinson, of Kentucky; John Barton Payne, State Senator Frank L. Ball and John T. Ramey, member of the Virginia House of Delegates from Fauquier County.

The meeting opened with invocation by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church.

Ball Makes Speech.

The address of welcome was delivered by Senator Ball, who congratulated the organization on its laudable undertaking and assured it that it would meet with success with such united, wholehearted cooperation as was being manifested.

John Barton Payne declared that the time for propaganda has passed, and that action tomorrow beginning the construction work should be sought.

Representative John M. Robison stated that nothing meant more to a community or a State than good roads and that he favored an increase in the Federal aid now given.

Louis A. MacMahon, of Clarendon, was last night officially notified of his nomination as Republican candidate to the House of Delegates. A large gathering of the candidate's friends attended the ceremonies on the front porch of his home.

L. C. McNemar, chairman of the convention at which MacMahon received the nomination, made the notification speech in which he assured the candidate the loyal support of the organization.

Amid loud applause and while the Independent Band of Ballston played old political songs, MacMahon accepted the nomination, stating his sincere appreciation thereof and outlining his policies. He launched into an attack upon the so-called "Democratic machine."

Machine Is Attacked.

MacMahon said in part:

"The Republican and Independent Democratic platforms calls for a reduction in the price of automobile tags. There is no hope for such a reduction with the election of Democrats.

"We are committed to work for the repeal of the short ballot, which takes from the people the right to elect many State officers.

"I stand on a platform pledging to work for simplification of election laws in the State, including the election of circuit court judges by the people instead of by the Legislature.

"These judges appoint the members of the electoral boards, which in turn appoint the judges of elections and registrars. Thus they control the county's medium of expressing the will of the people.

"Until Circuit Court judges are elected by the people and are made accountable to the people, we shall continue to have a travesty on popular government in the counties of Virginia.

"Judging by the tidal wave of Republican and Independent Democratic sentiment that is sweeping this State, it is clearly evident that out party will have a majority in the House of Delegates.

"Master or Servant."

"The local platform pledges me to work for the passage of a measure giving the people of Arlington County the right to determine their own form of government.

"I urge you not to allow yourselves to be swerved from the paramount issue in this campaign for the House of Delegates. It is simply this: Is the man who goes to Richmond to represent Arlington County to be the people's master or servant? It has proven expensive for the county to send masters to Richmond in the past; it would be economical to send a servant this year."

In conclusion, MacMahon said, "The battle is in your hands. I am confident the outcome on November 5 will be a reiteration to the world that Virginians today are equally as courageous and fearless as were their forefathers, who gave the Nation birth."

What promises to be the largest political rally during the campaign in Arlington County, which ends in November when the voters will select a governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general and delegate to the House of Delegates, will be the fall meeting of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County to be held today in the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse.

The meeting will open promptly at 1 o'clock with a luncheon, to be followed by addresses from candidates, both Democratic and Republican.

Among the speakers will be Mrs. Sarah Lee Fain, member of the House of Delegates from Norfolk, who will be the personal representative of Dr. John Garland Pollard, the Democratic candidate for governor, who is unable to be present; James H. Price, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor; Col. John R. Saunders, Democratic candidate for attorney general; Callon B. Jones, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor; J. Cloyd Byars, former State senator, who will speak as the representative of Dr. William Moseley Brown, the Republican candidate for governor; E. D. Mutersbaugh, who will represent Capt. C. C. Berkley, Republican candidate for attorney general; Louis A. MacMahon, Republican candidate for the House of Delegates from Arlington County, and Hugh Reid, Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates from Arlington County.

Mrs. Julian Simpson, president, will introduce the speakers.

The Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club will give a card party and dance tonight at the Potomac Boat Club, in Washington.

The Arlington County Bankers Association held its monthly meeting yesterday at the Boulevard Bakery, at Clarendon, with the president, Dr. G. B. Fadeley, in the chair.

Unanimous indorsement was given to the service charge now in force at all banks. The association expressed its appreciation of the hearty cooperation being given by the public.

According to reports from the county clerk's office, $7,434.35 has been received from the State as Arlington County's share from the gasoline tax for the month of August.

The executive committee of the Lyon Village Citizens Association meeting last night announced the appointment of the following standing committees: Roads and sidewalks, Robert E. Freer, chairman; Henry Young, Monroe H. Stockett, I. C. Buchanan, and R. W. Marshall; community house, Louis C. Carl, chairman; S. Groome Eareckson, C. B. Long, C. W. Clever, and Mrs. Robert E. Freer; law and legislation, Amos C. Crounse, chairman; O. R. McGuire, Guy Birdsall, M. G. Ely, and George Rucker; constitution and bylaws, R. W. Marshall, chairman; Robert E. Harris and S. Groome Eareckson; liaison agent between the association and the county board of supervisors, A. M. Dawson; delegates to the District Council of Citizens Associations, Robert E. Freer and I. C. Buchanan; alternates, R. W Livingston and Horace Benton.

The association will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the offices of Lyon & Fitch at 8 o'clock.

The ladies' auxiliary to the Arlington Fire Department will hold a special meeting tonight in the community house on Columbia Pike at 8 o'clock.

FUNDS ARE SOUGHT FOR RESCUE SQUAD

Chief Leonard Asks Prince Georges County Board for Assistance.

WORK OF UNIT OUTLINED

A plea for financial assistance for the Prince Georges County rescue squad was presented to the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday by Chief H. L. Leonard on behalf of members of the organization which, he said, is furnishing a well-equipped rescue service manned by trained men.

Chief Leonard told the commissioners that since its inauguration about a year ago the rescue squad has cared for more than 300 persons injured in accidents or requiring transportation to the hospital and that funds for equipping three ambulances and supplies used had all been provided by members of the squad.

He cited several instances where the squad had been credited with the saving of the lives of persons injured in accidents and told of the squad in a recent case having expended two tanks of oxygen in an effort to save the life of a young girl.

Has Trained Personnel.

The squad now has two ambulances in active service, one at Bladensburg and another at Glenndale, is equipping a third and has a trained personnel of 89 members of the Volunteer Fire Departments of the county. The squad was the first rescue squad in the world to be organized as a part of a volunteer fire department, the chief declared.

The demands on the rescue squad have become so numerous that there is difficulty in finding ready cash enough to care for expenses of the work, he said, and asked that the county commissioners provide some aid for this worthy work.

The county commissioners were visibly impressed with the earnest plea made by Chief Leonard and with the straightforward manner in which he produced facts about the organization which he originated and for which he has been given much credit.

Aid May Be Given.

They were not sure of their legal rights in the matter and asked that they be allowed some time to consider the matter before making a decision.

The commissioners said, however, that they would furnish the needed assistance if they could find a way to do so legally.

It was brought out that only yesterday morning the squad gave first aid and carried to the hospital a woman who had been severely burned in Mount Rainier and the efforts of the squad are believed to have helped save her life.

Funeral services for Henry Elmo Hunter, 37 years old, 2600 Twenty-second street northeast, manager of the Cameo Theater, Mount Rainier, Md., will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Wright's Undertaking Parlors, 1337 Tenth street northwest. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Hunter died Sunday at Sibley Hospital from the effects of pneumonia. He formerly managed theaters for the Universal Circuit, at Harrisonburg and Staunton, Va. He was a member of Federal Lodge of Masons. He is survived by his widow, four daughters, Miss Elizabeth Hunter, Miss Helen Hunter, Miss Billie Hunter and Miss Edith Hunter; a son, Henry Elmo Hunter, jr.; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hunter; a brother, J. Francis Hunter, and a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Dalton.

The board of ministerial training, the Rev. C. Fred Anderson, president, met this afternoon. This evening Holy Communion was celebrated with Bishop Welch presiding. The annual memorial service was conducted by the Rev. W. C. Strohmeyer, Charleston. The sermon was by the Rev. H. S. Chapman, Wheeling.

Gov. Conley will be one of the speakers Saturday when there will be a temperance rally with O. M. Pullen, superintendent of the West Virginia Antisaloon League, presiding.

MANSLAUGHTER LAID TO DRIVER OF TRUCK

Kensington Man Held After Cement Worker Dies in Accident.

BOND IS SET AT $2,000

Charges of manslaughter yesterday were placed against Elisha Pratt, colored, of Kensington, said to be the driver of the truck which turned over Monday afternoon on the Norbeck Pike near the Manor Club, resulting in the death of Forrest W. Gooding, a cement worker, of Kensington, and injuries to four colored men who were riding in the truck.

Pratt told police at the time of the accident that another colored man, Tanney King, had been driving, but an investigation revealed that King was not in the truck and that Pratt was the driver, police said. He is lodged in the Rockville Jail, awaiting preliminary hearing October 3 in the Rockville Police Court. Bond has been fixed at $2,000.

Howard Hopkins is in Montgomery County Hospital at Sandy Spring in a critical condition as a result of the accident. Wilfred Simpson is in a serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital and two other Negroes, William Hopkins and Earl Budd, were injured.

ICE-PLANT ARSON TRIAL OPENS SOON

Owner Accused of Having Part in Insurance Fire Plot.

CASE DRAWS INTEREST

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 24.—J. C. McClung, Waynesboro oil dealer and real estate prospector, will go on trial in Circuit Court here next Monday on an arson charge growing out of the destruction of his idle Elkton ice plant last April 6. More than two-score witnesses have been summoned, the number adding to the interest already attached to the case.

In the hearing of McClung, court attaches will see one of those rare instances in which the accessory to an alleged crime is tried before the principal is haled before the bar of justice.

Too Ill for Trial.

This almost unparalled instance—as far as local court annals are concerned—results from the fact that Roy Wheeler, young Waynesboro lawyer and real estate agent, a graduate of the University of Virginia and son of B. E. Wheeler, former mayor of Charlottesville, is physically unable to stand trial now.

Wheeler, who was indicted as the principal in the alleged conspiracy to defraud a score of fire insurance companies of the $25,000 insurance carried on the idle ice plant, was seriously injured in an automobile accident at Ivy two days after his release here from jail. Wheeler was permanently injured when his automobile left the Jefferson highway and plunged to the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway tracks below, and now is unable to sit up. His spine is said to be permanently injured. He remained a patient at the University of Virginia hospital for two months after the accident.

Both Free on Bond.

Wheeler was at the ice plant when the fire broke out early on the morning of April 6. He and McClung were indicted by the April grand jury, and since have been at liberty under $5,000 bond each. Wheeler, who was caught several miles from the scene of the fire after he was seen to dash from the burning structure, told officers that the fire was accidentally started by him when he upset a small stove on which he was cooking breakfast into a pit of oil. Wheeler maintained that he visited the plant so early in the morning in order to map out plans for workmen who had been engaged to place the ice factory in operating condition.

The State contends that Wheeler visited the plant at the instance of McClung, the owner, and that the latter was fully aware of the young attorney's presence there. McClung maintains that he did not know Wheeler was at the ice factory at the time, and that he had more to lose by the fire than he had to gain.

Purchaser Hoped For.

McClung insists that he intended resuming operation of the small plant with the intent of finding a purchaser. He bought the abandoned plant December 15, last, from R. R. King, of Charlottesville, a real estate associate of Wheeler's father, paying $5,000 cash and giving bonds for $15,000. The plant has not been operated for five years.

State insurance division officials will assist Commonwealth's Attorney D. Wampler Earman with the prosecuting, while the National Board of Fire Underwriters also will be represented at the trial. The array of counsel, according to the reports, will be the most impressive gracing the Rockingham Circuit Court in many years.

The State maintains that in insuring the property for $25,000 McClung laid the foundation for the alleged conspiracy and that wheeler acted as the agent of the owner. Counsel for Wheeler stated at the preliminary hearing that the Waynesboro attorney was interested in the property solely as a real estate agent with the hope of making a sale, and that the young man lost a prospective commission, rather than gaining, by the fire.

License Modification Asked by Station WTBO

(Associated Press.)

The Radio Commission yesterday took under advisement the application of the Cumberland Broadcasting Co., operating station WTBO at Cumberland, Md., for modification of license, so that it may operate on a frequency of 620 kilocycles with 500 watts power instead of its present assignment of 1,420 kilocycles with 50 watts power.

J. P. Hummell, one of the owners of the station, told the commission that the station at present was unable to reach sections of Cumberland and that if it could not obtain modification of its license he probably would not ask for its renewal. Cleveland, Ohio, stations entered objections to the proposed change and the Radio Commission submitted that already the State of Maryland had more than its quota of broadcasting facilities.

COMMUNIST CHIEFS CHARGE UNFAIRNESS

Spurned by Gov. Gardner, They Allege Attempt to Outlaw Them.

REOPEN WIGGINS INQUIRY

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Declaration of Gov. Gardner that he would not hold a meeting with communist labor leaders similar to that held Saturday with several textile mill owners was followed today by a statement from the National Textile Workers' Union Southern organizer attacking the Saturday conference. The general situation was quiet with no new labor disorders reported.

Gov. Gardner's statement was made at Raleigh in response to an inquiry from the Associated Press. He said he did not "know how to confer with such a group, who themselves do not speak the language of law and order and whose whole doctrine is fundamentally destructive and alien to North Carolina."

The State chief executive on Saturday conferred with three leaders in the North Carolina textile industry on ways and means of dealing with lawlessness which followed textile strikes. Two persons have been killed and two others kidnaped and flogged during the disorders.

Beyond the fact that the "general situation" was discussed, little information was given out concerning the conference. Present in addition to Gov. Gardner were Arthur M. Dixon, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association; Stuart Cramer, former president of that body, and J. H. Separk, president of the North Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association and the Gaston County Textile Association.

Hugo Oehler, Southern organizer for the National Textile Workers Union, in a statement today said the conference was "a new attempt to outlaw the National Textile Workers Union and all workers' organizations in the leadership of which there are communists."

"It is significant," he said, "that no workers, not even those subservient to the dictatorship of the bosses, were called into the conference."

Gov. Gardner emphasized today that his Saturday conference was solely in the interest of preserving order.

Inquiry into the death of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, victim of a mob which sought to prevent her attendance at an advertised communist meeting, is to be resumed tomorrow by a coroner's jury at Gastonia.

Seven men have been charged with manslaughter for her death.

REZONING REFUSED ON ROCKVILLE PIKE

Airport Company Loses Its Move to Erect Business Structures.

OTHER PLEAS GRANTED

Residents along the Rockville pike yesterday won a partial victory in their fight against industrial encroachment on what they claim is the most beautiful pike in the country. The Montgomery County Commissioners at Rockville yesterday refused the petition of the Congressional Airport, Inc., for rezoning of the 300 foot frontage of the airport at Halpine from residential to commercial.

The victory was partial because the commissioners granted two other applications which had been fought by the residents on the ground that they would be the opening wedge for further commercial encroachment on the pike and its environs. The county commissioners held, however, that the other two petitions were for changes along the railroad tracks, where residents would rarely be built and where commerce naturally should go and furthermore, were not visible from the pike.

Of the latter two petitions, one by T. H. Lenovitz, asked for rezoning of acreage on the Halpine avenue and Vier's Mill road, to permit the erection of a domestic cooking gas distributing plant by the Philfuels Corporation of Oklahoma, which plans to distribute the gas in containers to consumers unable to take advantage of the usual means of obtaining gas. This petition has been the subject of legal question and had been referred to counsel to the county commissioners, Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, for study. It was contended that Lenovitz, not being the owner, but merely having signed an agreement to purchase, had no right to make application for rezoning of the property. This feature was avoided by the filing of a contract of sale, showing that Lenovitz had purchased the ground in question, containing 2¾ acres.

The other petition was filed by Frank L. Hewitt, Henry A. Dawson and Hatton A. Waters and asked reclassification of that tract of land containing 8.76 acres designated as "factory site" on a plat of a subdivision of land made by the International Shoe Heel Corporation and is understood to have been filed in order to make way for the erection of an airplane factory.

The action of the commissioners in refusing the plea of the aviation field is construed as indicating that the demand of the residents that the pike be kept free from commercial enterprises in order that it might develop as a beautiful residential area is concurred in by the commissioners and to indicate that no such encroachment will be permitted.

Berry E. Clark, clerk to the county commissioners, advised the county commissioners that his office is badly in need of a more up-to-date indexing system to make it possible to more quickly find the ownership of any given lot in a subdivision. The present system of indexing worked quite well until about 1915, when the great boom in Montgomery County real estate began and since then there have been so many changes of ownership that to find the ownership in less than at times several hours is impossible.

Clark suggested that in line with the effort being made to make the country records more easily accessible to those persons who are interested that a modern card indexing system be provided as an adjunct to the present system. The county commissioners agreed that this was a necessary feature and directed Clark to take steps toward the preparation of such a system. The new system will cost a comparatively small amount, the only actual expense being the purchase of the index cases, and this is considered very slight, in view of the increase in efficiency which will result.

Several members of the county police force have attained the length of service provided by law for an increase in their wages of $5 per week and the county commissioners yesterday directed that the following policemen should receive the additional pay for long service: Charles Barnes, Robert Merson, Robert Darby, E. R. Jones, Joseph Oldfield, Douglas Dosh and Joseph Nolte.

The following bids being the lowest for road and street construction in the Bethesda area, the county commissioners directed that the following contractors be awarded the contracts after bids were opened yesterday at the commissioners' meeting in Rockville: Concrete curbing, sidewalk and paving on Wisconsin avenue from Bradley boulevard to Davidson drive, M. Cain Co., Inc., $3,540.04; paving, curbing and gutter on Chevy Chase boulevard, Chevy Chase, Raymond H. Burrows, $27,390.07; sidewalk west side of Wisconsin avenue from Watkins avenue to Leland street, Raymond H. Burrows, $2,334; paving, curb and gutter and sidewalk on Montgomery avenue, Highland Park, from Wisconsin avenue to Cloverdale street, F. Erwin Ray, $5,632.85.

The county commissioners were informed yesterday by Edward J. Murphy, of Section 3, Chevy Chase, that a special street improvement in that section is being made and that special front foot benefit charges for such improvement will be charged against the owners of the property abutting subject to the approval of the county commissioners. The commissioners indicated that they would approve such a charge if legal qualifications were present.

According to Jailor Wilson Darr, Mrs. Darr saw Hinkens pass a bottle to Joseph Lloyd, who was sentenced to 30 days in jail Monday for driving while drunk.

While Darr was trying to recover the bottle from the prisoners, Hinkens attempted to escape from the jail by driving away in his car across the street. He was overtaken after a chase of more than a mile. He was later released on a $500 bond, pending the action of the grand jury on a charge of transportation and possession of liquor.

Under the Virginia prohibition law, to give a person any amount of liquor is the same offense as the sale of the same. Hinkens is an engineer on the Richmond-Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad.

Pearson, of Gainsville, Va., while driving on the road between Fairfax and Annandale, is alleged to have sideswiped a car driven by Walter Peterress, of Philadelphia, County Engineer Novelle Larkin, who witnessed the accident, called the sheriff's office. The driving while drunk charge was dismissed and a fine of $25 and costs was imposed for reckless driving.
